

KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON

Herald and News

FEBRUARY 26, 1965

The Great Klamath Basin Provides A Colorful, Historical Heritage

CAVALCADE of PROGRESS

Historical Section D

The Klamath Basin began to blossom in the 1880's when irrigation was first attempted. It remained until after the turn of the century, however, before irrigation was begun on a gigantic scale such as the government-sponsored irrigation canal. History of the construction of this canal is long and interesting. This view, a current aerial picture, shows the A Canal as it meanders through portions of the suburban area. Circular track at upper left is the Klamath County Fairgrounds. Street bisecting the picture is South Sixth Street.

— Floyd Studios —