National Survey Set On U.S. Eating Habits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman has announced a national survey of American eating habits will be made by the department's agricultural research service (ARS) and the Economic Research Service (ERS).

The study will cover households and individuals. Its purpose is to gather and analyze data on food consumption patterns and the nutrient levels of U. S. diets.

The department conducted a national survey of household food consumption in 1955. No nationwide survey of household food consumption, covering about 15,000 households, will cover four seasons. The survey will begin with the spring of 1965 and continue through the winter of 1966. The study of diets of individuals will be made in the spring of 1965 only.

Department officials said survey results will be of value to many public and private agencies and individuals, Congress, federal agencies, the food industry and educators. The information produced will help guide farm and food policies. It will provide an appraisal of the nutrient adequacy of diets in the United States and be the basis for consumer educational programs.

As with data from the 1955 survey, the new data will be used for economic and marketing research on the demand for agricultural products. It will aid in utilizing the potential of new foods and food processes, in developing new and improved uses for surplus foods, and in conducting research designed to lower processing and distribution costs, officials said.

The department said households will be selected to yield representative samples of U.S. housekeeping families in each of the four seasons. The information obtained will be tabulated to give data for four regions, separately for farms, rural nonfarm, and urban families. Much of the information also will be available for families classified by income.

The department said each homemaker interviewed will be asked to supply specific information on every type of food used in the household during the week preceding the interview. The interviewer will want to know the quantity used, where the food was purchased or obtained otherwise, and the price for purchased food.

Interviewers also will want to know expenditures for food eaten away from home, age and sex of persons eating from household food supplies, their relationship to the household head, and the number of meals eaten. Food management practices such as canning and freezing also will be noted.

The department said an analysis of the nutritive content of the food consumed will be made after the basic information has been collected. Then researchers will make an appraisal of the trends over the past three decades in food consumption and dietary patterns in the United States.

GOP MUST REBUILD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The president of the National Federation of Republican Women believes the GOP must concentrate on rebuilding to wipe out "the memory of dreadful mistakes" in the last national election.

Mrs. Dorothy A. Elston of Middleton, Del., told her executive committee Monday the party did not act as a team in 1964. She also blamed Barry M. Goldwater's defeat on "three large lies. . .told about our candidate on the subjects of civil rights, Social Security and warmongering."

TWO IS COMPANY, NOT FOUR — A purebred, registered, Nubin nanny goat, owned by Mrs. Erling Erickson of Chiloquin, gave birth on March 8 to four kids, determined to survive, three bucks and one doe. Single and double births in goats is common, but the birth of four is unusual, more so if all survive.

Range Chapter Newly Formed

A south central Oregon chapter of the American Society of Range Management has been organized in Klamath Falls under the guidance of the northwest section resident, Dr. Dillard Gates.

Dr. Gates stated that the objectives of the society are to advance the science and art of grazing land management; promote conservation and sustained yield of forage, water and soil; discuss range problems; exchange ideas; and encourage professional improvement.

Serving as officers of the newly organized chapter for this year are Roy Sines, of the U.S. Forest Service, as chairman: Louis Randall, a Bonanza rancher, as vice chairman, and Roger Culver, of the Soil Conservation Service, as secretary - treasurer.

Members of the society will be made up by ranchers, range technicians, educators, researchers, land managers, foresters, wildlife biologists, soil scientists, and others who are interested in range land management.

Goat Bears Quadruplets

CHILOQUIN — Mrs. Erling Erickson, Star Route, Box 103, has reported that one of her purebred registered Nubin doe goats gave birth to four kids on March 8 and that all are doing well and healthy.

The multiple birth is an unusual happening with goats and sheep and even more unusual when all survive.

Mrs. Erickson raises goats for their milk and for breeding stock. At present, she has five does, two bucks and four yearling does. The new litter of four adds three bucks and one doe to her herd.

In previous years, Mrs. Erickson has had the privilege of being called upon by other goat breeders, throughout the western United States, to purchase some of her purebred stock. One particular breeder from Alaska purchased one buck and two does. The buck was flown to Alaskan goat raisers ranch while the two nanny goats were sent by boat.

OSU Bulletin Reveals Value Of Agriculture

OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY — "Oregon's Agriculture Is Everybody's Business" is the title of a new Oregon State University bulletin, which proves its point with these new statistics:

The processed value of Oregon farm commodities in 1963 was a record $649 million, providing a "tremendous base for economic growth and development."

Farmers received and spent $419 million that year.

At least 93,000 full-time jobs —or one out of ever seven jobs in the state—were provided by agriculture in 1963.

Consumers benefited from agricultural advances as well. Food purchases took only 19 per cent of the average Oregon family income in 1963; in 1951, it was 23½ per cent.

The special report was prepared by Dr. Gerald E. Korzan, agricultural economist, to assess agriculture's role in the state's economy today. Copies are available from the OSU Bulletin Clerk or from county extension offices.

Agriculture extends far beyond the farms and ranches in touching the lives of everyone, the report emphasizes.

In addition to the 65,600 persons who work on farms and ranches, another 18,000 work at processing and handling farm commodities; 5,200 work at supplying agricultural equipment, supplies, and services; and 4,500 work at transporting and exporting farm production, the report notes.

These 93,000 people, in turn, "spend most of their incomes in Oregon, providing jobs in retailing, commerce, and the professions for many others," Korzan points out in the introduction.

Korzan's report focuses attention as never before on the value added by processing of Oregon farm commodities.

Income received by farmers in 1963 totaled $419 million, the report shows. The value added by processing was $230 million, Korzan noted. This includes all the activities performed by processors or first handlers, such as meat packers, canners, freezers, or simply cleaning, grading, and sacking in the case of grass seeds. It does not include wholesaling and retailing.

In the case of vegetables, the farm production itself was valued at just under $50 million. Value added by processing, including packaging materials, totaled $84 million.

A breakdown of the $649 million processed value of farm commodities showed $256 million came from livestock products and $393 million from crops. Meat animals provided $123 million; dairy products, $78 million; poultry and eggs, $44 million; and other livestock products, $3½ million.

Grain and hay crops totaled $75 million; vegetables, $134 million, fruits and nuts, $90 million; and all other crops, $92 million.

Korzan includes some other striking observations about Oregon's agriculture. These include:

Oregon farmers and ranchers produce surplus feeder cattle that are fattened in other states. If economic conditions were "right," 150,000 to 200,000 of these cattle could be fattened here providing at least 7,000 new jobs.

Production of turkey hatching eggs is a multimillion dollar industry in Oregon and its importance may increase.

Green beans are king in Oregon, worth $46 million when canned and frozen, enough to provide 50 million people with all the beans they want.

Oregon's vegetable production for processing (green beans, corn, peas, beets, and carrots) has increased 32 per cent in the last seven years.

Seed crops continue to increase in tonnage and value. In 1963, they were worth $33 million when cleaned, graded, and sacked.

Value of nursery and greenhouse products increased 62 cent in the last seven years. In 1963, it had become a $28 million industry.

Oregon dairymen produce one billion pounds of milk each year, more than a quarter of a ton for every Oregonian. Processing and handling provided nearly 3,000 jobs.

Of the 26,000 persons employed in transportation in 1963, about 4,000 owed their jobs to the transport of agricultural commodities and supplies needed in farm production.

In 1963, 82½ per cent of all outbound tonnage from the Portland docks consisted of agricultural commodities, a considerable proportion of which were Oregon produced and processed.

ALASKAN BRIDGE

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) —The Department of Highways and the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads have recommended construction of a $60 million bridge across Turnagain Arm southeast of here.

OLENE BUCKAROOS

The Olene Buckaroos Beef Club is led by Taylor High and Jim Grimes. A meeting of the club was held recently at the home of Dan Emrick, also assisting in the club. Bob Garrison was appointed junior leader and new shirts were discussed for fall fair. Slides were shown on the fair last fall.

Future plans include a field day to be held at Taylor High's ranch and members were asked to be thinking about a community project for this summer.

There are 30 members enrolled in the club with some having breeding stock and others beef projects. Officers include Teresa Grimes, president; Larry Hilyard, vice president; Doris Emrick, secretary; Barbara Marshall, treasurer; Ruth Emrick, news reporter, and Spike Grimes, song leader.

Ruth Emrick,
News Reporter.

SHASTA CHAMPS CLUB

The Shasta Champs met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe O'Brien. Mr. O'Brien assists Vinton Wagoner in leading the club.

On March 4 letters were read about 4-H scholarships, permanent records and achievement programs. Lee Holliday told about her trip to Salem in February concerning "Know Your State's Government." She also stressed the importance of complete permanent records in winning awards in 4-H.

Lee Holliday, Dave O'Brien, Lloyd Wagoner, Patsy Rosandich and Joyce Stahl agreed to give reports at the next meeting on various phases of swine production.

The club discussed several ideas on what to do as a community project. Everyone has agreed to bring new ideas and suggestions to the next meeting which will be held April 8 at the Stahl home.

Definite plans for a rummage sale and skating party, both to be held in April, will also be made at the next meeting.

Sylvia Rosandich,
News Reporter.

PINE GROVE CLUB

The Pine Grove Livestock Club consists of both sheep and beef projects. Leaders are Dr. W. F. Dean and Dr. Fred Wedam with John Horton and Tom Harris assisting. A meeting was held Feb. 27 at the home of Dr. Orton Mann. All parents were present at this meeting. The pledge was led by Linda Vanderhoff, committee reports were given and the animals were discussed and the care that would be given them.

Each of the sheep members were given the name of a disease on which to report at the next meeting, which will be held on Friday in April. Rope halters are to be made at the next meeting.

Refreshments were served by Marilyn and Carol Mann.

The club decided that each 4-H member should make a scale drawing of what they thought the community project should look like. This will be the banner showing our thanks and appreciation to the Rotary Club and buyers of our animals and for sponsoring the Klamath Junior Fall Fair.

Judy Gambrell,
News Reporter.

MERRILL DAIRY CLUB

A meeting of the Merrill Dairy Club was held at the Lyman home on March 8. Visitors included Lisa Lyman and Mr. Reppe. The tree project was discussed as well as National Awards Program. Mr. Hobson talked about the leaders' meeting and classes at the fair. A poster discussion was held on cattle diseases. Future plans include the planting of trees in the neighborhood.

The next meeting will be at the Stafton home on April 12 at 8 p.m.

Egg Prices Hit Bottom

OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY—Oregon egg prices have dropped to the lowest level since 1942 under the weight of record U. S. egg production, Stephen C. Marks, extension agricultural economist at Oregon State University, reports.

Egg prices have been declining almost steadily since 1965 began, the economist observes. The increase in U.S. egg output stems from increased rate of lay, thanks to favorable weather conditions.

Prices paid Portland area producers for large eggs, at the ranch, and delivered and graded at Portland on March 8 ranged from 25 to 29 cents a dozen. This was eight to 10 cents lower than the year earlier. Medium - sized eggs were quoted from 19 to 23 cents a dozen, or 11 to 12 cents lower than a year ago. Smalls were priced from 13 to 14 cents, down seven to eight cents.

Prices to retailers were 34 to 40 cents a dozen on the large size, 31 to 34 cents on mediums, and 22 to 25 cents on smalls.

The price drop is "not surprising" in view of the upsurge in egg production to new record levels in the West as well as the nation as a whole, Marks said in his review of U.S. Department of Agriculture reports.

Egg production totals for January sh ow Oregon's one per cent smaller laying flock produced six per cent fewer eggs than during the same month in 1964.

WANT-AD WONDERS Trade Mark.

Good Samaritan Uses Want Ads To Bring Comfort Without Cost

Fairie Mae Stewart of Alameda, Calif., answered a telephone near to her piano with "What would you like to hear?" She then plays a hymn requested by the caller. Thus, hundreds of lonely, heartsick or troubled souls who read of her free act in the Want Ads have received comfort.
