Weekend Meet May Show State GOP Power Struggle

By ZAN STARK

SALEM (UPI)—Meetings this weekend and next may reveal the view of the struggle for power and leadership being waged by Oregon Republicans. State Chairman Elmo Smith will preside over this weekend's meeting in Salem of the State Republican Central Committee. Smith has not been invited to attend the "Dorchester Conference" at Lincoln City April 5-11. This session was called by Rep. Robert Packwood, R-Port-land, "to assess the problems and future of the Republican party."

Smith, National GOP Vice Chairman Mrs. Collis Moore, and National Committeeman Lowell Paget—all snubbed by Packwood—stood firmly behind Barry Goldwater last year after he was chosen Republican presidential candidate.

Packwood stirred Smith's ire during last year's campaign by ignoring the regular party machinery and setting up a separate organization to get Republicans elected to the legislature. The power behind Packwood's successful drive was former Secretary of State Howell Appling Jr., next to Gov. Mark Hatfield the best Republican vote-getter in Oregon.

Although there has been no hint of confirmation, many political observers seem convinced that Appling may try to succeed Hatfield as governor after next year.

Packwood insists the "Dorchester Conference" is not designed to launch Appling's campaign. Packwood indicated Appling would attend the conference.

Three present occupants of the statehouse will be vitally interested in what might unfold. Hatfield, now a "lame duck," is suffering the erosion of power that besets every major officeholder who is prevented by law from seeking re-election. But as potential U.S. Senate candidate he still has significant political strength.

It is generally accepted that Secretary of State Tom McCall will seek the governorship. A primary battle between McCall and Appling could be significant. There also could be a bruising fight if Appling decided he wanted to try to take the state GOP chairmanship from Smith.

Opponents Say Justices OK'd Vote Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI)—An opponent of the administration's voting rights bill said Wednesday he had been told the Supreme Court justices even before it was submitted to Congress. "I think that its unethical," Marvin (Pete) Banister who has purchased the cafe from Keith Rice and Les Bennett of Klamath Falls.

A new chef from Alturas, Marion Campbell, will direct activities of the kitchen and restaurant, and Tobe Hann Klamath Falls men, who purchased the staff as bartender at the Frontier Room.

Senators before the bill was introduced that he had submitted and four associate justices. According to Dowdy, Katzenbach described the reaction of the high court judges as "enthusiastic."
