The weak play overall is designed to disrupt the opponent's normal communication and make it hard for them to reach the correct final contract. It has two main disadvantages. The first is that sometimes the opponents stop to double the overcall and when the smoke of battle clears away it is disclosed that he has lost more than he would have if only he had kept still. The second is that it frequently gives the eventual declarer valuable information as to how to play the hand.

There is a third disadvantage. Sometimes it actually helps the other side to reach the best final contract. Left to themselves, North and South might well have failed to get beyond four hearts but West's three club bid started them swinging along and made it easy for them to reach six diamonds.

It also made the play quite easy for South. After winning the club opening and pulling trumps with two leads South decided that the odds were overwhelmingly in favor of the queen of hearts in the East hand. Hence he cashed queen's ace of hearts, led a second heart, and finessed his jack. Then he picked up East's queen with the king and disbelieve the other side to reach a third heart after the queen failed to drop. Then East would have either had to give South a ruff and discard or led away from his king of spades.
