EDITORIAL

THE COUNTRY IS SAFE

One month from today will be election day all over the country. Between now and then the people will be in more or less of an excited condition over issues, more imaginary than real.

Difference of opinion and of policy exist between candidates but we have faith in America and her people and do not believe the life of the nation depends on the election of any particular man or any set of men affiliated in any political party.

Whether Ganong or Brower is chosen as district attorney for Klamath county will not determine whether or not this community shall advance.

The great fight between Tom Kay and Jeff Myers may go either way at the November election and Old Oregon will be much the same so far as general progress is concerned.

Coolidge, La Follette or Davis may win in the national election and yet the nation will continue strong as the leading country of the world.

Different policies of different political parties greatly affect the nation, but much of the political argument thrown out now is a smoke screen and when the men elected take office they are so surrounded by laws and customs that the old ways are followed in the main.

Real progress and real advance in governmental ideas comes when the mass of the people have been educated to believe those things good and proper for the country. Then any party in power is glad to help the people carry out their desires—they become no longer a political issue.

In the meantime don't let some bug-a-boo devised by a political leader scare you into believing that our nation is in great and immediate danger.
