Admah sensed a barbarous joy in O'Neill's discomfiture. He was glad to have the upper hand, and for mixed reasons. These high toned people could make game of him in their own homes. Good. But Hersinger's belonged to Admah Holtz, and they should know it. Even though he looked away, he could feel Flora Lee's eyes. His revenge was an inworthy one; but most revenges are.

"Whell. Ad. How's candy?"

"Preity good, Uncle Lafe. And town sham?"

"Tain't so good as 'twas. I've been though he booked away, he could feel Flora Lee's feet through the press of Saturday shoppers. Now and then one would call his name, but Heldz was oblivious. Candy Man!

And in the best of spirits, volleying the new Hersinger's with pleasant abuse. Flora Lee led her sprightly train out through the store and into the stereet. Admah Holtz stood still, just where she had stricken him, his head whirling. He had ched the Tadidion and had been felled by a simple phrase. The Candy Man. Well, he was the through Man. But why should she have remembered that one thing about him?

A crowd was constantly coming and going in the busy saturday trade, but he saw less than their shadows. Glaring after his victorious enemies, he wondered what had possessed him to make this petty demonstration? Or if he hated them, as was his right, why hadn't he gone berseek and made a foul, healthy sense of he? Mornally le recalled a gold both which O Neill has shown, Why hadn't he aimed at that touch and let Heromer's go hang?
