OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY OF KLAMATH FALLS

"Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it"—Abraham Lincoln

THE FARMERS' WAY OUT OF TROUBLE

When ex-Governor Lowden says that agriculture faces ruin and bankruptcy unless the nation gets behind the farmer and helps him out of his troubles, he does not give due weight to what has already been done to help the farmer, yet by saying that the farmer must organize to market his products in order to escape this fate Mr. Lowden admits that the farmer must help himself.

The government has done almost everything that can be done by a government to help the farmer. It has given him a complete system of credit, both for mortgage loans and for the yearly needs of production. By the warehouse law it has made his harvested crops a basis of credit and by establishing standard grades it helps him to obtain full market value.

It tells him how to fight diseases of animals and plants and in case of epidemic it conducts the fight. It provides education; practical demonstration on experimental farms and through agents, and it provides information on crops, where and how to grow them, on market conditions and on weather. It has given the tariff protection the farmer has asked, and is ready to give more as need appears.

Mr. Lowden points out the weak spots in agriculture when he says that farmers must organize for marketing. The farmer alone can do this on their own initiative, first in small groups, then by combining these groups into associations, and so on until a great national organization controls each commodity. If the government should undertake a campaign to organize co-operatives, it would breed a lot of incubator-hatched, pap-fed weaklings, always under the thumb of a bureau and always turning to Uncle Sam to show them the way out of trouble. Such organizations would lack the very qualities essential to make co-operation a success. The first of these is a seasoned belief in the co-operative principle, and the second is a reliance to apply and adapt it to the circumstances of each farm product.

FACTORIES AND REFINERIES

On the line of one western railroad during the present year four new beet sugar factories will be built at a cost of $5,250,000, in time to handle the 1925 beet crop.

It is stated that last year farmers averaged $41 per acre net on sugar beet production and the acreage this year will be much increased.

The American sugar beet industry, protected by a tariff that enables these factories to compete with cane sugar produced by much cheaper labor, encourages prosperous conditions for the beet grower and the transportation companies.

So it is perfectly plain that without the tariff there would not be this profitable crop for the farmers, nor the operation of sugar factories, nor the enormous railroad tonnage of hauling beets to the factory and hauling sugar to market.

Another item should be mentioned, the enormous quantities of beet pulp and factory by-products that are used in feeding and fattening swine, sheep and cattle.

The most rudimentary economist or politician would not attack an industry or the tariff that protects a home industry, the benefits of which are so widespread.

"Stability or instability in production and distribution is largely the result of collective judgment of the trades. They cannot form a right judgment unless they know the facts as to their own business and as to the trade as a whole. The greatest waste in all our economic system is the periodic inflationary boom and its consequent ensuing slump with all their speculation, unemployment and extravagance, for without the boom there is no slump. The correction of this waste lies in the prevention of booms."—Herbert Hoover.

AGENCY

KLAMATH AGENCY, May 1.—A party was given at the headquarters of Klamath Agency, under the auspices of the Woman's club. A large crowd attended. Some time was spent in games and contests, much good cheer and enjoyment being evidenced by everyone. Later a mock trial was held and caused great merriment. At midnight refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake and punch were served.

Miss Ferol Porter, student at Sacred Heart academy, was home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Porter, last week-end.

The Misses Leatha and Jessie Gray spent the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Moffat.

Mrs. Orville Elliott is visiting in Medford this week, having remained here when she and her family motored over there last week-end.

Miss Katie Lewis of Warrenton, Ore., was home to the Agency to visit with her mother.

MERRILL

MERRILL, May 1.—The Benara high school gave a play entitled "Sally Lunn" Tuesday evening in the Merrill community hall. A good attendance was present. The young people played their parts well.

Mrs. E. Cox is very sick and confined to her bed most of the time. Everything is being done for her that will in any way comfort or help her. Besides a nurse, Mrs. Dick Anderson is staying with her.

Mrs. E. F. Merrill is improving at the present time, after a relapse from the flu. Mrs. Merrill is being cared for in the home of Mrs. C. M. Merrill.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Merrill, accompanied by R. H. Anderson, R. L. Dalton, Guy and Lois Merrill left Wednesday morning for Redding, Calif., where the burial services for their daughter took place on Thursday. They expect to return home the last of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Kattenhorn and family attended a music recital given by Miss Graham's pupils in Klamath Falls Thursday evening. Their son Lowell, who is just nine years old, took part in the recital, and rendered his part beautifully.

Mrs. Guy Merrill and children returned home Monday from an extended visit to Kansas with her people. Mrs. Merrill has been home since the middle of last December.

Mrs. Thos. Lynch left Merrill Tuesday to go to the lake and where she will cook for the Cox brothers' camp. The brothers are getting in 2,000 acres of grain this spring.

KENO

KENO, May 1.—Although the water is rather cold, some of the girls of this community have been enjoying the swimming. They say that the water is fine.

The big dance in the new Keno hall was attended by many. All reported a good time.

The Moore restaurant opened its doors Friday at noon. It is being operated by Mr. and Mrs. Watson. John Schumacher has moved here to take the place of Charley Kinsey, who has been working on the state highway.

Death Probe

Mrs. J. W. Allan

A paper on some birds, written by Mrs. F. A. Baker, was read by Mrs. John Johnson. Feathered songsters, more numerous than most people think, were mentioned, and a plan was made for their protection, and to use all means to entice them to our neighborhood.

Mrs. J. W. Allan concluded the program with a talk on birds of prey. Expressions were made in connection with this subject by members, concerning the advisability of exterminating certain species, whose undesirability is questionable.

The Adventures of Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy

Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy and Grampy Hoppity and little Ned sat under the tree and wondered what they might do.

Just outside the hollow tree sat the three hoodlum dogs of the wicked magician.

The rubber hoodlum dogs had promised that they would sit there and see that none of the children came near the tree. "And the worst part is," Raggedy Ann said, "given little Ned the last pretzel I picked from the tree. Now he will have nothing more to eat. And, what gets so hungry he can not stand it any longer, to leave and return back to little Ned's house with mama."

This made all feel very sad, for they wished so much to rescue little Ned's nice mama from the magician.

Finally, after thinking and wondering and he ripped six stitches out of the top of his head. Raggedy Ann said, "Now all of you remain quiet and do not matter what I say to the rubber hoodlum dogs."

"We promise!" the witch and Grampy Hoppity and little Ned and Raggedy Ann said. And they held their hearts.

Then Raggedy Andy said to one of the dogs, "Will you take a note to the magician for me?"

"Nope!" the dog replied. And, when Raggedy Andy asked the other dogs if they would take a note, they all replied "Nope!" and looked very mean. At this Raggedy Andy scratched his rag head, for he did not know what to do. He had wished the dogs to take a note to the magician and the others could leave the hollow tree and follow right to the magician's castle. Now that the dogs do it he did not know what to do. Grampy Hoppity said, "Hoodlum rubber dogs why won't you go to the magician?"

"Come, silly," the dogs replied. "If we take you, you would escape. And if you escape the blame is on us and let all the air out of us and we will be as pancakes and not nearly so useful!"

"Ah!" Grampy Hoppity said, "I see." Then he turned to Raggedy Andy and Raggedy Ann and said, "So Raggedy Andy and Grampy Hoppity and the stick with Raggedy Andy's sword until it was as a needle, then when all was ready, Raggedy Grampy Hoppity rushed from the hollow tree to the large rubber hoodlum dogs.

At the first swift sharp sword, Raggedy Grampy Hoppity thrust his sharp sword into the second rubber dog, and the dog fell on the ground. Raggedy Ann, the little Ned, from the hollow tree, applauded the great fight. The third rubber dog, who had happened to his companions, jumped this way trying to knock down Grampy Hoppity, and he succeeded in doing this and was about to jump up on Grampy Hoppity and squash him, when Raggedy Grampy Hoppity gave the dog a great cut with the sharp sword, immediately the great fight with the rubber hoodlum over. There the three rubber dogs lay, with all of them, and as flat as pancakes.

"Now!" Raggedy Andy cried as he waved his sword. "Let us hurry to the magician's castle and rescue little Ned's nice mama before the magician discovers what we have done to his hoodlum dogs."

So, the Raggedys and little Ned and Grampy Hoppity ran until they came to a hot bun bush, and as there was a lemonade spring right there they stopped to have some lunch, for little Ned and Grampy Hoppity were very, very hungry.
