Athletics Snap Out Of It and Take Two From the Senators

Connie Mack's ball club came out of its nose-dive yesterday and started up again. Beaten twice on succeeding days by the champion Senators on the home lot in Philadelphia, the Athletics won back the loss yesterday by taking a double engagement from Bucky Harris' team. The Athletics, therefore find themselves again with a lead of three full games over the nearest team. The Senators muffed a great chance to take the lead again.

The Athletics took the first one 11 to 3, and the second 9 to 4. Walberg pitched all the way in the first one for the Athletics against four pitchers for Washington. Harris also went the distance for the Athletics in the second game. The Senators used Walter Johnson and O'Brien.

The White Sox lost a chance to pull up on the Senators. They were beaten by the Tigers in Chicago, after 10 innings, when a victory, coincident with the Senators' double defeat, would have placed them just one game below second place. Score 7 to 6.

The Yanks continue to break even, they lost the first game to the Red Sox in New York 3 to 1 and won the second, 7 to 2.

St. Louis beat the Indians in St. Louis 4 to 3.

The Giants walloped the Braves. The Dodgers, holding second place, were idle, and the Pirates, in third, gained half a game defeating the Cardinals in Pittsburgh, 7 to 4. The Cubs whaled the Reds in Cincinnati 13 to 3.

Thousands See 'Manna' Come Home To Victory In Famed Epsom Derby

EPSOM DOWNS, Eng., May 28.—From the sudden masses standing in the rain on Epsom Downs, to the lonely frontiersman in the outposts of the British empire, the voice of Britannia raised a cry today: "Come on Steve; good old Stevey."

For Steve Donoghue, the full-grown mite of a man, who had ridden five winners already in the English derby, got aboard H. E. Morris' horse, Manna and coasted home to win the greatest sport event in the world for the sixth time, at odds of 9 to 1. Manna must be a great horse, of course, being the first one since 1911 to win both two thousand guineas and the derby, but like Earl Sande, in the United States, Donoghue seems to loom bigger and nobler in the public imagination than the steeds that carry him home.

Boehler Twirls a Hitless-Runless 9 Innings, But Loses

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28.—Although George Boehler twirled nine innings today without allowing Sacramento either a hit or a run, he lost his fling at the hall of fame in the tenth inning when the Senators bunched two hits and defeated Oakland 2 to 0. Shellenbach allowed the Oaks 7 hits, but came out ahead.

The tail-end Vernon team continued its winning streak by again swatting Salt Lake, this time by a 3 to 0 score. The Seattle Indians allowed San Francisco to run wild again, the Seals getting the lengthy end of the 6 to 3 tally. Rain washed out the Los Angeles-Beaver game in Portland.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

Being a perfect lady and not given to cuss words what must Glenna Collett have suffered in silence when she topped those two drives in her match again Joyce Wethered in the British amateur tourney.

There is an interesting sidelight in Glenna Collett's effort to lift the British amateur women's golf crown, that is worthy of mention.

Glenna was eliminated from the tourney in the third round by Miss Joyce Wethered, rated of recent seasons as Great Britain's greatest golfer. The defeat was not unexpected. It was Miss Collett's first attempt to win the British title. It was her first important tourney on foreign soil. And Miss Wethered's play has marked her as one of the greatest feminine players in the game's history.

But her friends and American golfing enthusiasts in general would have liked to have seen Miss Collett in the finals. And this thought brings out the fact that conditions governing the tourney doubled the obstacles in her path to the finals and victory in the final.

Miss Collett and Miss Wethered were in one "bracket" in the early rounds. Miss Cecil Leitch was placed in the other bracket.

This arrangement automatically gave Great Britain two chances to defeat the American girl. Had Miss Collett triumphed over Miss Wethered she would have been forced to defeat Miss Leitch in the final round, as Miss Leitch won all matches in her climb to the finals. Little thought was entertained that she faced real opposition before the finals.

The elimination of Miss Collett automatically gave England the two leading contenders—one in each bracket.

In fairness to Miss Collett this condition might have been altered. The sporting thing to have done would have been to let Miss Wethered and Miss Leitch play for the honor of meeting the stranger from the strange land.

However, Miss Collett learned much in the tourney and by the time another year rolls around will have perfected her tournament play considerably. Till then

What a fizzle that lightweight tournament. New York bred, nursed and groomed, turned out to be.

One by one the best men in the division—who risked their reputations in the hand-picked series, were eliminated. The last of these to go—Sammy Mandell—was wished out on a foul the other night, leaving Jimmy Goodrich, an unknown, sitting sort of dazed in the ring, alone in whatever glory was left.

Sid Terris, rated by fair critics as one of the best lightweights of the day, was eliminated early in the series. So was Luis Vicentini.

poppery, clever little Argentine with the red shoes.

And yet, when the world at large failed to take seriously Rickard's announcement that the tourney would produce "the next lightweight champion of the world" he was hurt.

These tournaments are the bunk. There are but two ways a fighter can rightfully claim a title. One is defeating the champion. The other is by going into the open market and licking all the leading contenders who seek a jewel in the crown.

Why kid ourselves by believing that the matter can be settled in a tourney from which several of the leading contenders withdraw voluntarily and in which some of the others won mainly because they faced second raters?

It's all the bunk.
