If Your Grocer Should Go on a Permanent Strike

Maybe you'd have to go to Chicago or some other big trade center for your staples. It is quite possible that in time you could arrange for your coffees and spices to be delivered direct from the planters.

What a scramble there would be for the necessities of life—for existence.

Your Home Town grocer brings your table necessities, and the little luxuries that make living worth while, within your easy reach.

The convenience of his service is always yours—you can depend on it. Yet, his profit is smaller than that of any other merchant on earth.
