"Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it"—Abraham Lincoln

DEMOCRATIC PUBLIC SCHOOLS

One of the greatest issues before the American people is whether our public school system shall remain democratic, or whether it shall be used more and more in the direction of equipping a professional class.

The newspapers are full of protests that high schools, colleges and universities emphasize too much academic and professional equipment, when about nine-tenths of the citizenry of our country must work for a living in industries, in homes and on farms.

A remarkable union high school in California—the San Mateo-Burlingame district—is attracting wide attention of educators by giving employment to more than half the high school boys outside of school hours at good wages, doing all the work of maintaining the school plant.

For about 15 years, several hundred high school boys have built new buildings, maintained all repairs and kept the grounds in a model condition—doing actual manual labor and learning the ordinary trades that make community life possible—Principal Glasscock has accomplished this and the community likes it.

His ideal is a useful, contented, self-respecting citizen, who can earn an honest living, build a home and support himself and family.

IMMORTALIZED THE PIONEERS

The newspapers of the United States are handing compliments to the late Herbert Quick who has recently passed on from his brilliant career as a fiction writer to the real of the unknown.

He was to Iowa and the Middle West such a chronicler of its true life as was the late Emerson Hough, who wrote The Covered Wagon and immortalized the conquerors of the Far West.

Both Hough and Quick were all-around Americans, and sympathetic with the struggles of the pioneers who made this nation a reality.

Their stories are clean as the winds of the Iowa prairies, wholesome and invigorating as the lives they depict, leaving no excuse for reproducing degenerate literature for American families to read.

HOW TAXES ARE INCREASED

Governor Brown of Indiana says that if $100,000,000 worth of property is taken off the tax list, the taxes must be proportionately increased on another $100,000,000 of taxed property.

Governor Brown is right. He has given the right reason for high taxes in many communities.

Our laws which permit the continued issuance of tax exempt bonds, are constantly increasing the tax load of one man in order that another may go free.

"Stop, Look and Listen!"

Man violated the "vital relation to the physical world" and paid the penalty in disorder, deterioration and death.
 The modern pace and the modern diet are ruining our eth, our health, our dispositions.

The miserly old fellow burst a loud laugh. "That's when you," he said triumphantly, "clothes I got on were father's."

A well known author of his house one morning found the letter that he had intended to call it to his mind, and of considerable importance to him.

DINNER STORIES

An old fellow, reputedly wealthy, insisted on dressing like a tramp. His clothes hung on him like rags. One of his neighbors ventured to remonstrate with him. "Am surprised," said the neighbor, "that you should let yourself come so shabby."
 "But I am not shabby," was the response.
 "Yes, you are," said the family friend. "Remember your father? He was always well dressed. His clothes were very neat."

The letter was nowhere found.
 He summoned the servant you seen anything of a letter lying about?"
 "Yes, sir."
 "Where is it?"
 "Posted, sir."
 "Posted! Why, I had not the name or address on the envelope!"
 "I know that, sir," was the reply. "I thought it must be in one of them anonymous letters you've been getting lately."

SUGGESTIONS
 When your lace curtains are old and tender try this method of washing them: Shake the curtains gently to remove the loose dust. Then put them through several baths of plain warm water without soap. Fold the curtains and do not unfold to handle, as the weight of the water in them is likely to tear them. Rinse up and down and squeeze, but do not wring.
 Wash in the same manner twice in warm soapy waters. Put on to boil in cold water, using a tablespoon of cream of tartar to a gallon of water. Be very careful in stirring not to tear the curtains. Rinse, starch and dry.
 Many expert curtain workers prefer to dry their lace curtains first and then to starch them, as they take the starch more readily by so doing. It is also a good plan to stretch a length of cotton or a sheet over the curtain frames very tightly before putting the curtains on. This support will be found a great aid in preventing the tearing of the tender places.

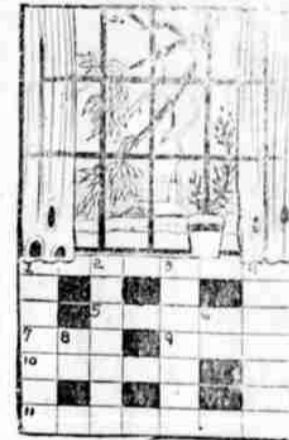

Many directions for making a diet for constipation advise drinking large quantities of water. While it is true that two glasses of water taken when the stomach is empty will for some individuals stimulate the action of the bowels certain persons should be careful in this respect. If there is any tendency to weakness of the stomach muscles so that they become dilated, two glasses of water taken at a time may cause considerable delay in digestion. Such persons should take their water in small quantities and at frequent intervals.

THE BEST OF ADVICE

BY CLARK KINNAP
 Is the world moving too fast for Man?
 It seems so.
 Sir William Arbuthnot Lane tells us why cancer and other vicious diseases are scourging man. "We must bear in mind that the body has been evolved slowly, through millions of years, to deal successfully with simple foods. Gradually, during the last century or two, civilization has turned upon us a wide variety of prepared foods, highly cooked or highly refined or highly milled; and the body has not been designed for them. It does the best it can, but it is not equipped to rid itself of their refuse.
 The number of diseases and ailments is multiplying.
 Civilization, instead of becoming more simple as it advances, is becoming more complex.
 John Burroughs, naturalist, hit close to the heart of things when he said:
 "Man can and does alter his environment to a limited extent, but not so radically as his environment alters him."
 "He cannot change the air he breathes, or the water he drinks, or the nature of the food he eats, nor change his vital relations or the physical world.
 "His mechanical relations to a certain extent, wait upon his will, but his vital relations are forever fixed."
 Even the most simple minded person must agree that, if he wishes to remain alive and in a state of health, he cannot change the air he breathes. He MUST NOT change it. Yet he is changing it. It is being poisoned by gasolines. Every pair of lungs is feeling the effects of the millions of motors fuming through the city streets and on the country roads.

he drinks has not been changed, but he never thinks about the changes which have been made and which are constantly being made in the "NATURE" of the food he eats.
 Study history, and see that civilization after civilization has arisen and disappeared, for the simple, obvious reason that in every civilization as it developed and progressed, man changed the NATURE of the food he ate, going from the natural state to the denatured or unnatural state step by step in pace with the development of the period in which the civilization existed.
