

EVANGELIST IS PURIFYING BAD TOWN OF HERRIN

(By HOWARD S. WILLIAMS)
(Layman Evangelist)
(Written For The United News)
HERRIN, Ill., July 8.—There are some great stories in these meetings where, as some one has expressed it, "former pistol toters now carry T. N. T. (the new testament) on the hip."

Believe it, or not, but Herrin business men refused to cut out their noon prayer meeting on the Fourth of July. Some of these very men testified at the independence day meeting that they celebrated in a very wet fashion a year ago.

Noon finds Herrin's business centers largely deserted while scores of miners, business men and professional men, flock into the principal theatre and have a big song service. They talk it over with God and help one another in the saved life of brotherly love.

Representative business men here are getting the real spirit of Christianity which will make them moral as well as commercial and civic leaders of the community.

As usual the devil tried to beat me to the Herrin job. Shortly before I arrived two of the central figures in the Williamson county strife were slain, a closely contested mayoralty election occurred, my huge tent was blown away—forcing me to open my meetings in Herrin's modern high school gymnasium—and one of my cooperating churches dropped out.

I immediately began a frank denunciation of the outstanding sins of both church members and open sinners in such a way that the clan was pleased and made me special offerings. Then I visited Sheriff George Galligan and he asked me to arrange an officials' night. I preached that night as I never had before and the sheriff obviously was deeply moved, and showed both amazement and appreciation as friend and foe took his hand in token of a brotherhood that can exist only as Christ masters men and women.

Such as the obvious results of Herrin's spiritual awakening. If only I have made the people of Herrin pause and think of the master of men, I will feel that I have succeeded.

GIANT FARMERS GRAIN ASS'N. IS ABOUT TO GO UP

CHICAGO, July 8.—(United News)—The sweltering babel of the Chicago wheat pit buzzes with discussion of the fate of the Grain Marketing corporation, the $26,000,000 farmers' co-operative which, when founded a year ago was hailed as the greatest co-operative marketing plan in history.

The contract which four great grain houses united in placing their organizations and elevators at the disposal of farmers expired July 28. When two important member units were voted membership in the Chicago clearing house late today, LaSalle street rang with predictions that the co-operative would pass out of existence.

It was said that the move by the concerns, Rosebaum brothers, and the Armour Grain company, meant that they did not intend to carry on in the co-operative scheme after the termination of the contract. The memberships in the Chicago clearing house entitle them to do business as individual units.

Brokers declared that the co-operative effort had been a failure, and that its affairs would be wound up.

The United News learns, however, that irrespective of whether the four unit grain concerns decide to renew their contract after July 28, a strong effort will be made by farmer "members" or stockholders, to carry on the co-operative. Withdrawal of the four combined companies, Rosebaum Bros., the Rosebaum company, the Armour Grain company and Davis, Nolan and Merrill of Kansas City, would mean that the concerns would take with them their physical assets of organization and elevators. But should they do so a group of farmer members would endeavor to carry on, using warehouses of leased elevators in the co-operative marketing scheme. Should the basic contract not be renewed July 28, this alternative would rest with the farmer members.

Gray Silver, president of the co-operative, did not discuss reports of an imminent winding up of the company beyond stating "the policy of the farmers is to continue."

"All the rights of the farmers will be protected through the term of the contract," he declared today. "All the rights of the farmers will be protected through the term of the contract," Rosebaum also declared.

The co-operative corporation was organized in 1924. Opposition grain groups declare that farmers have not supported it in sufficient numbers. A heavy blow came when the Illinois Agricultural association went into court to prevent further sale of stock in the co-operative. In a hearing before the Illinois commerce commission, an agreement was obtained from the grain company to refrain from selling stock until July 28. This resulted in withdrawal of salesmen from all midwest and central states.

More difficulties were seen when the brokerage house of Dean, On-

CHILDREN NEED GLAND NOURISHMENT

Most children today are victims of gland deficiency, and are therefore listless, backward in their studies, and sullen and discontented.

In large institutions for children where they are under the constant supervision of capable medical examiners, it was found that many children were suffering from gland deficiency.

Experiments with gland extracts were made and the change in the disposition of the children was marvelous. These results were made known to the public by the newspapers, and many thinking parents became interested in the treatment.

One mother says, "I had become very much interested in the articles on the gland treatment for children. Our son is ten years old, backward in his classes, lacked concentration, and seemed to lack the strength to play as his playmates did. I decided to try a gland treatment and Kath, the Gland Tonic, was recommended by our druggist. The results were wonderful. We now have a robust, active boy, well up in his classes, and a leader in all the games. I regret that we often misjudged the boy, when his physical condition only was the cause." & As a stimulant and tonic for children, Kath, the Gland Tonic, has no equal. For sale by:

tavia and company, backed by Rosenbaum grain interests, which participated in the co-operative, failed last week with liabilities estimated at $35,000,000.

Today's move of two participating houses in obtaining the right to do business in their own names is described by many as "the beginning of the end" although officials of the co-operative indicate that a stiff effort would be made to continue with farmer support, should the companies withdraw.

BUSINESS GIRL IS BEST WIFE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 8.—The pulchritudinous girl of the hot-house variety whose cloistered existence has taught her none of the responsibilities of life is not exactly desirable as a wife.

Miss Adelia Prichard, president of the national federation of business and professional women's clubs, who visited Kansas City Wednesday is the authority for the above.

"You know," said Miss Prichard in an interview with the United News, "the girl who knows the ins and outs of the hurly-burly business world, is the real, unadulterated, embryonic wife."

"Trifles don't perturb her. She is not only broad-minded and practical but is the kind who won't run weeping to her husband every time something goes wrong in the household—such as when the potatoes burn."

Miss Prichard paused to let it be known that she—as the young business girl she idolizes—cannot be bothered by mere trivialities. "The business girl," she then resumed, "is schooled in economics. She'll handle the family budget and do marvelous things with it. She'll know the value of money and understand her husband."

"But take the hot house variety. Her environment has been amid luxury. Her every wish has been gratified by lavish parents. Her hands are not calloused by toil, but her brain is unschooled in resourcefulness and nine times out of ten if suddenly deprived of her possessions she becomes a burden." In Miss Prichard's opinion every young man should think twice before picking a wife.

"You will find the business girl the wife who will fill the breach at the opportune time."

Miss Prichard was in Dallas, Tex., to attend a federation convention in Oregon.
