"Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it"—Abraham Lincoln

MONKEY TRIAL BECOMING BATTLE OF THE COLONELS

There are signs that the Monkey Trial at Dayton will suffer a change of name and go down to history as the "Battle of the Colonels." For Judge Raulston has conferred the title of Colonel on Clarence Darrow. Truly it is an ill wind that blows nobody good. So, whether or not the Monkey Trial proves a lasting boon to mankind, Colonel Darrow will at least have acquired a handle to his name.

South of the Mason and Dixon line it is a serious disability to lack the title either of colonel or judge. It is so easy to be one or the other that to be either stamps one as being a nobody minus. Colonel William Jennings Bryan already enjoyed the title of Colonel. He got it from the Secretary of War in 1898, when there were more colonels than regiments.

So with true Southern hospitality and that broad discretion granted to the court in Southern States, he conferred the colonelcy upon Darrow, expressing hope that he would "take it home with him."

Having gone so far, the least Judge Raulston can do is to create Colonel Dudley Field Malone, and Bainbridge Colby is sure to cut his other engagements and hasten to Dayton for his commission. Then it will be unfair to overlook Professor Scopes, who, in spite of being neglected, actually has an interest in the case, being the defendant. Last of all, to avoid any charge of unfairness, the judge must give the Monkey a tail to hang by. Colonel Monkey would be an euphonious address.—S. F. Chronicle.

SUMMER FIRE PERILS CAN BE REDUCED

This country has now entered upon a season where the least carelessness anywhere in the matter of fire may sweep away hay and grain fields, houses and barns, hillside pasture, standing timber and valuable watershed cover.

The warning against fire cannot be too often repeated or too scrupulously followed.

The city-bred person has little conception of the extreme ease with which disastrous fire may be started in summer time in the country. The farmer knows, the forester knows.

For the campers that go into the national forests there is a regulation requiring them to obtain camp fire permits. Motorists are warned that throwing of lighted matches or tobacco from moving vehicles in the country is now penalized by State law.

Constant vigilance must be exercised at all times. Be sure the match is out. Build no unnecessary fires; clear the ground first; never leave the fire unattended; thoroughly extinguish the fire before breaking camp.

Only by such care can the danger of loss of property, and even of life, be diminished.

An Illinois traveling salesman died last week leaving an estate variously estimated at from 400 to 600 hotel towels.

HEART NO HOME PROBLEM

What do boys think of the girl who kisses promiscuously? What do they think of flappers? What do they think of petting parties? It seems to me these questions are answered from the standpoint of the average boy in response to a request for views on the subject I appended to a letter from a girl who complained because all boys insisted on kissing.

I hope that the girls who follow this column (they are legion!) will read the letter carefully and think about it. In it are the answers to many of the questions they ask me.

The boy writes:

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I read THANK YOU'S letter in your column. I can't agree with everything she says. One thing I can agree with her on is "50-50." Turn about is fair play.

Men who are square and clean deserve a pure sweet wife. How many of them get one? Not many.

Naturally, if a girl kisses a boy the first time he takes her out, he thinks she does that with them all. Why shouldn't he? Love doesn't grow on trees.

How many boys can resist a pretty face with red lips upturned to theirs? How many of the same boys would push the case if the girl said "No!"? The greater per cent would not.

Experience teaches us to be best for them, and there can be no doubt that our use of meat has added to the happiness of the lower animals far more than it has detracted from it. In like manner it is reasonable to suppose that the machines will treat us kindly, for their existence is as dependent upon us as ours upon the lower animals.

"They cannot kill us and eat us as we do sheep, they will not only require our services in the partitioning of their young (which branches of their economy will always remain in our hands) but also in feeding them, in setting them right when they are sick, and burying their dead or working up their corpses into new machines."

Thus visions one sees!

DINNER STORIES

The story is told of an engraver in the government printing shop at Washington who, when the first $20 yellow back gold certificates were issued, received his salary in these new bills and decided to take a trip to New York.

When paying his hotel bill he handed the clerk one of the yellow backs, whereupon the clerk turned it over several times, then refused as politely as he could to accept it, saying that he had never seen such a bill, and thought it of no value.

"Why," said the engraver, "of course it's good. I made it myself."

"That's what I thought," returned the clerk, as he rang for the house detective.

TODAY'S RECIPES
Roquefort Dressing—Rub the salad bowl with garlic, adding a teaspoon sugar, half a teaspoon each of salt and paprika, a dash of black pepper and a sprinkle of tobacco sauce or cayenne pepper. Crush a large slice of Roquefort cheese into these flavorings with a fork and blend thoroughly, add two tablespoons lemon juice or one of concentrated vinegar, then slowly add a cup and a half of mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce hearts.

SUGGESTIONS
 Bits of red pimento make an attractive and tasty addition to creamed flakes—crab, lobster or shrimp—to be served on toast.

Do not add butter, bacon or any other fat to canned salmon in baking salmon loaf. It is oily enough in itself.

Canned peas mixed with creamed canned shrimp make an easy and tempting dish.

When you plan to gather a dish of wild strawberries or raspberries for dessert, pick them with their stems as flowers are picked. Wash them and place in a dish or bowl, stems and all. Sprinkle them well with powdered sugar and let them be eaten from the stem.

Celery stuffed with peanut butter and laid on lettuce leaves makes a delicious salad.

Artificial flowers that have become worn and soiled can be easily renewed by brushing the petals with all paint mixed with gasoline.

To fit any candle to any holder dip it for a moment into very hot water. This will soften the wax so that it can be easily inserted.

It is obvious that we ourselves are creating our successors.

We are daily adding to the beauty and delicacy of their physical organization.

We are daily giving them more power and supplying, by all sorts of ingenious mechanical contrivances, that self regulating, self acting which it can predict, will be to them what intellect has been to the human race.

Samuel Butler foresees that in the course of ages we shall find ourselves the inferior race, a race of machines!

"Inferior in power, inferior in that moral power of self control, we shall look up to them (this new race we are creating) as the acme of all that the best and wisest can ever dare to aim at.

"No evil passions, no jealousy, no avarice, no impure desires will disturb the serene might of those glorious creatures.

"Sin, shame and sorrow will have no place among them.

"Their minds will be in a state of perpetual calm, the contentment of a spirit that knows no wants, is disturbed by no regrets.

"Ambition will never torture them.

"Ingratitude will never cause them the uneasiness of a moment.

"The guilty conscience, the hope deferred, will be unknown to them.

"If they want 'feeding' (by the use of which very word we betray our recognition of them as living organisms) they will be attended by patient slaves whose business and interest it will be to see that they want for nothing.

"If they are out of order they will be promptly attended to by the physicians who are thoroughly acquainted with their constitutions; if they die, for even these glorious animals will not be exempt from that necessary and universal consummation, they will immediately enter into a new phase of existence, for what machine dies entirely in every part at one and the same instant?"

Butler supposed that when the state of things shall have arrived which he attempts to describe, man will have become to the machine what the horse and the dog are to man.

"He will probably continue to exist, may even improve, and will be probably better off in his state of domestication under the beneficent rule of the machine than he is in his present wild state.

"We treat our horses, dogs, cattle and sheep, on the whole, with great kindness, we give them whatever ex-

THE BEST OF ADVICE
 BY CLARK KINNAP

There are few things of which the present generation is more justly proud than of the wonderful improvements which are daily taking place in all sorts of mechanical appliances.

It is natural, with the vast development of the mechanical world, and gigantic strides with which it has advanced in comparison with the slow progress of the mechanical world, that men should be asking what the end of this mighty movement is to be. In what direction is it tending? What will be its upshot? These questions generate another:

What sort of creature is man's successor in the supremacy of the earth likely to be?

The question is often debated by scientists.
