

BOSTON BRAVES TOPPLE GIANTS FOR CRUEL ROW

BOSTON, July 24. — (United News) — Although they have been notorious losers over a period of years, it may be, and in fact, it is, quite likely that the Boston Braves will decide the National league pennant contest this season. For the second time in two days, the Giants, who were knocked out of first place by the tail-enders Thursday, dropped a game Friday to the Boston team.

Larry Benton Friday held the Giants to seven hits, winning his fourth consecutive game, 3 to 1.

For some inexplicable reason the Braves have defeated the Giants more times this year than has any other team in the circuit. Out of 13 contests between the two teams, the Braves have taken nine. The Pirates, now at the opposite end of the percentage column from Boston, have defeated New York only six times, as has Brooklyn.

With Pittsburgh again defeating the Cards, 5 to 3, the Pirates became more firmly established one full game ahead of the Giants.

Cincinnati's victory over Chicago 2 to 1, tied the Reds with the Dodgers in third position.

The Athletics pushed ahead of the Senators a bit further by virtue of slim Harris' shutout of the Red Sox 6 to 0. During the nine innings Harris allowed only two hits. The Athletics are now one full game ahead of Washington.

The Tigers caught up with the Browns in fourth place by winning over Chicago 5 to 4.

The Tigers' Slugging 400

One reason for the rampage of the Tigers which makes them loom as the one threatening team in the American league right now is the wrecking propensities of the trio composed of Ty Cobb, Harry Heilmann and Al Wingo. All three are hitting over .400.

she was runner up in the British all-comers tourney. From 1920-23 she played with Suzanne Lenglen, French star, in the doubles matches of the Wimbledon tourney and was victorious each year.

The first year, 1920, she is credited with winning more prizes than any other player in the game in the same length of time.

She has defeated Miss Kathleen McKane, famous British star, several times in decisive fashion. She is probably the second greatest player in the European net circles—beating only to the great Suzanne.

Apart all the talk of the inability of big league pitchers to stop the heavy hitters comes this suggestion from a New York scribe. He points out that the over-abundance of pitchers in the big leagues rather than the scarcity of good ones, may be the cause of the lack of efficient twirling, as evidenced by the batting and run scoring sprees staged every day.

He points out that most of the major league teams carry so many pitchers that none of them is worked regularly at reasonable intervals. This causes them to lose the desire to pitch and the form to do so.

There is more than mere prattle in this.

The modern pitcher may well feel that he doesn't have to turn in a large string of victories a year to remain in the big show and draw a big league salary. He isn't asked to pitch often. Few regulars on the major league staffs are asked to go to the box every four days and hurl a complete game.

There is no longer an odium attached to warming the bench. A few years ago every club had its "regular" staff, of four or possibly five pitchers, who worked in rotation day in and day out. Those who failed to make this "regular" crew were second string pitchers, and classed as such in estimating their worth. A pitcher fought to win a place as a regular.

On the other hand, however, it may be that the scarcity of good pitchers has brought about the present state of affairs. Managers, unable to find or develop small groups of pitchers into regularly rotating staffs, were forced to acquire extra hurlers to strengthen their staffs.

Truly pitching furnishes plenty of chance for discussion.

"Pirates belong at top," says Manager Bill McKenzie. And seven other National league clubs can say the same thing about their clubs. The thing is to get 'em there.

STREET'S ARM IN FINE SHAPE SUNDAY'S GAME WITH M

With a telegram from Andy Elmer Secret from Roseburg, announcing definitely that he will be here to hurt Sunday and that his arm seemed to be in wonderful condition, Manager Fred Glover believes he's sitting on the world and that the Pelicans will slip up into a tie for first place Sunday.

The Pelicans already have one victory from the McClouds to their credit. It was a close game of errorless ball. The Pelicans won out by a close score, 4 to 3. Incidentally that game was one of Mohler's best. He struck out 14 men that hot afternoon and allowed but 8 hits.

This will be the last opportunity to see the Pelicans in action on the home lot for several weeks. Next week they go to Mount Shasta where they expect to make it the third straight victory. The lineup and box score for Sunday's game here: Norweg, M. W. Johnson et, Baynes and Street p.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

Miss Elizabeth Ryan, former tennis star, who has been winning fame in England and on the continent for several years, is bringing back to the United States with her one of the most startling styles of play boasted by any of the women stars of the day. This on the authority of tennis experts who have watched her play abroad.

She is given credit for having the power that she puts behind her chop strokes is little short of marvelous, all agree.

Which should make things interesting, if not a bit hectic, for Miss Helen Wills, Miss Jessup, Mrs. Malory and other home stars when she meets them in the various meets at Forest Hills in August.

Miss Ryan began to star in British tennis as far back as 1914, when
