DEMPSEY STARTS IN TRAINING FOR BOUT WITH HARRY GREB IN SEPT.

Heavyweight Champion Says He Will Meet Anyone At Michigan City In September But Harry Wills; Big Stiff Charges Money To Work Up Sweat

LOS ANGELES, July 25.—(United Press)—With his honeymoon over and the necessity of earning some money before him, Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, turned in early tonight, planning to start active training Monday.

The big boy has been back in town 24 hours, but already he has gone down and looked things over at the Manhattan gymnasium, which he owns, and laid plans for an active training season.

Dempsey's two brothers are in with him on the gymnasium deal, and the champion, with an eye to the pocketbook, came back to his own arena for training work. Fans pay good money to watch a champion work up a sweat.

Just when Dempsey and his estranged manager, Jack Kearns, would get together for a heart-to-heart talk is uncertain. Kearns said he was in no hurry, and Dempsey said "Monday might see us in conference."

It is predicted that, after the season, the two champion publicity getters of the sporting world will issue another of their stereotyped edicts to the effect that all is fair weather and the two Jacks have a common aim—bring in the jack.

Whatever their decision, Kearns will remain Dempsey's manager for another year and get his split of all receipts, as the Kearns contract has another twelve months to run.

Dempsey is looking forward to a Michigan City bout in September, having promised Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons that he would meet any one on the list except Harry Wills. "I understand it will be Harry Greb," the champion said today. "That suits me fine."

Tris Speaker and Rogers Hornsby In Lead for Slugging

NEW YORK, July 25.—Two playing managers—the veterans Tris Speaker of the Cleveland Indians, and Rogers Hornsby, the rather youthful pilot of the St. Louis Cardinals, lead the major leagues in batting.

Hornsby heads the National league with an average of .410, and Speaker tops the American league with a mark of .400.

Behind Hornsby in the National league are Wilson, young Philadelphia catcher, with .386, and Jack Fournier, veteran Brooklyn first baseman, with .382.

Harry Hellman, Detroit outfielder, and the former American league batting champion, is behind Speaker in the American league with an average of .394. Next to him in third place is his manager, Ty Cobb, with .392.

due credit for his part in Leonard's success with the Tigers today.

Bassler is one of the best catchers in the game. He has done noble service for Cobb while the Georgian has been trying to mold a pitching staff that could stay put for more than three days.

Much has been written of the uncertainties of golf. I like to write about it, especially after I play a punk game.

But what causes this comment is the recent defeat of Long Jim Barnes, newly crowned British open champion, by Abe Mitchell in an exhibition match.

After playing superb golf in the open tourney Barnes fell far off his form against Mitchell and the British pro beat him 7 up and 6 to play.

RECORD CROWD EXPECTED AT FAIR GROUNDS TO SEE LEAGUE

Game Called At 2:15 Sharp; Street Arrives In Pelicans And Is In Wonderful Condition

With all indications pointing toward a record-breaking crowd to see the fast McCloud team—league leaders—in action in Klamath Falls for the first time this season, the Pelicans are out to redeem themselves for the ignoble defeat at the hands of Weed last Sunday.

The McCloud team arrived last night and are bunking at the White Pelican. They all turned in early and are fresh to start the afternoon fray. As to who will twirl for McCloud, well, that is being kept dark. It is believed that they will match

Street's right arm hander however. Street, who arrived here yesterday morning, showed he could not show against McCloud when he held down hits here several days ago. He will be placed in the batting order tomorrow. (Continued on page 7)

SPORTS DONE BROWN

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

These are big days for baseball, tennis, golf and horse racing. The stars of these major sports are basking in the limelight of fame aplenty.

The minor sports are also enjoying a big season, however. For instance, the hundreds of thousands of followers soccer has in this country have been interested in the visit in the United States of Patsy Gallacher, called by many the greatest of all soccer forwards. Gallacher, an Irish internationalist and member of the Glasgow Celtics, has been playing in this country.

Gallacher has represented Ireland in the international games for many years. He has helped his club set the unprecedented record of winning six successive championships in the Scotch league. His team has won the Scottish cup a total of eleven times.

He may well be called the Babe Ruth of soccer. At least, he is to Scotland what Babe Ruth is to this country.

Mike Gonzales, Cuban, catcher, who has been sojourning in the big leagues long enough to pick up considerable knowledge of baseball in general and pitching in particular, rises to the defense of the present day pitchers.

"The pitchers of today are just as good as we always have had in the majors. The lively ball is what is making them appear to disadvantage," opines Gonzales.

Which same, coming from a man behind the plate, ought to bear some weight in this discussion, pro and con, relative to what is the matter with baseball, if anything.

Back in the days when the Boston Red Sox were riding on the top of the baseball band wagon—when Bill Carrigan was making his name as a manager—Dutch Leonard was having his first fling at fame.

He was ranked as one of the greatest southpaws in the game. When he was right his left-handed shoots were things of mysteries to American league batters.

Those who followed the destinies of the Red Sox in those days gave Dutch due credit for being a great southpaw. But they also were inclined to give Carrigan credit for making Leonard such. It was Carrigan's superb catching of the portside that made him a winning pitcher for years, it was agreed.

When Leonard was traded to the Yankees several years ago, after his brilliant career with the Red Sox had ended, he refused to report at the terms offered. He drifted out of organized baseball, even refusing to move from the Yanks to Detroit. Finally, however, he saw the error of his ways and got back into the good graces of the Tiger bosses.

Now, at the ripe old baseball age of 33, he is pitching great ball for the Detroit Tigers. And, granted
