CONTEST IS ON FOR NAMING OF STATE BULLETIN

Of much interest to all members of the Oregon Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs is the contest for a name for the state bulletin, under the auspices of the state bulletin committee, of which Miss Mame Zeigleman, first vice president, is chairman. The choice of a national federation pin or its equivalent in money if preferred, goes as a prize to the winner of the contest, the selection of the most desirable and suitable name being left to the decision of the state bulletin committee, which is composed of the chairman, and the following members, one from each of the 12 federated clubs: Astoria, Mrs. Margaret Hubler; Coos Bay, Mrs. Alice Maloney; Corvallis, Miss Merle Hollister; The Dalles, Miss Dora Sexton; Eugene, Miss Mozelle Hair; Hood River, Mrs. Susie Lynn; Klamath Falls, Mrs. Zella Jones; Medford, Miss Jane E. Olson; Portland, B. & P. W. club, Mrs. Pearl Baldwin; Portland, Women's Advertising club, Mrs. Celeste Harris; Roseburg, Miss Grace E. Taylor; Salem, Miss Rosalie Keber.

The contest, which started August first, and closes September 30th, is open to all members of the state federation, each being permitted to submit two names, which should be sent direct to Miss Zeigleman at 315 Platt building, Portland.

BOOK SEASON IS ADVANCING WITH COMING OF FALL

"Books make the home." So heads an old wood cut on a book now in the possession of an English library. Whether it was an old monk in an ivy-covered monastery, or an ingenious book-maker in centuries past, that is immaterial, but the facts remain that the heading on the old carving, no matter how old, is one of the clearest truths in the art of making a home.

Although the summer season advances so many attractions, beckoning to the world of out-of-door things, the season is ending, and the time for work within the home, evenings before the fireplace, or an afternoon's reading by the light of the setting sun, in gorgeous fall colors.

Frank Parker Stockbridge, familiar to readers of The Bookman, as a life member of the American Library association, has chosen ten books, some edited during the past year, others more recent. These books are all novels worthy of reading, light without being frivolous, and carrying heavy thoughts, without burden.

The list includes "The Little French Girl," Anne Douglas Sedgwick; "Arrowsmith," Sinclair Lewis; "The White Monkey," John Galsworthy; "The Constant Nymph," Margaret Kennedy; "The Green Hat," Michael Arlen; "So Big," Edna Ferber; "Soundings," A. Hamilton Gibbs; "The Thundering Herd," Zane Gray; "The Mother's Recompense," Edith Wharton; "The Carolinian," Rafael Sabatini; "The Reckless Lady," Phillip Gibbs; "Love," Elizabeth.

Readers of Klamath Falls need look no further than their own public library, which has the majority of the books mentioned above.

BOOK-REVIEWS ARE INTERESTING

In the August edition of "The Lariat," a monthly publication of western discussion and criticism of literature, several interesting books that will make good reading have been reviewed.

Among them are taken three which are said to be the "big-sellers" of fall literary endeavors:

"Little Dark Man and Other Russian Sketches," by Ernest Poole, author of "Russian Village Impressions" and nine other volumes. This latest work is Folk Tales and rendered into easily-read and easily-understood English narrative translations. His residence at Petrograd and coaching by Russian literary friends, enabled him to present these stories in a really attractive form. There are English renditions of Russian Myths, like "Mother Volgo" that border on the classical and will be considered precious possessions of our own literature.

For those who drank to the last drop John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," his new work has been received with much relish and the chosen few who were allowed to read it extend their appreciative praise.

"The Muse in Council," by John Drinkwater, eminent English poet, and author of plays like Abraham Lincoln and Robert E. Lee. These essays on poets and poetry, and the theory and practice of verse comprise a substantial volume worthy to be owned by an student of literature. To illustrate the charm of his treatment, take his chapter of Percy Bysshe Shelley, the most pathetic and yet delightful figure in English liteurature, considered by many as one of its Great Three. Drinkwater refers to him as "greatly loved by his friends and at least one woman, of splendid character, and inspired always by an intense devotion to the abstract ideas of liberty—he was one of the most Christian beings that ever walked the earth—the worst thing Shelly ever wrote is better reading than the best thing ever written about him.

There is always a large percentage of the reading public who enjoy the reading of translated books, believing that through them they obtain a touch of originality in the setting of the book, that is lost when written directly into the adopted language. Such a person would enjoy "Sunken Gold" by Andre Savignon.

Says the critic of "Sunken Gold," translated from the Frenca by Edgar Jepson, it is a fine novel for summer reading by any one, young or old. The style harks back to Treasure Island or the immortal Gil Blas. Only in this case the boy is an apprenticed sailor aboard a ship on which his grandfather serves as mate. It has a piratical master and crew, whose business it is to recover treasure from sunken ships. The divers descend and the giant captain and his dare-devil crew bring up engines, brass and bronze ship trimmings and even chests of treasure. Could there be a more glittering life of adventure than aboard such a treasure ship? There is tragedy and romance over a mystery letter written to the boy's grandfather but seized and held by the turbulent captain of the wrecking ship. How the boy comes out of it and how the heroine is developed remains for the delight of the reader.

Percy: "I tried to play golf last summer, but gave it up when I got hit in the head by a beastly ball and knocked silly."

Pauline: "Tought luck. Can't the doctor do anything for you?"
