Things Get Tougher For Liquor Drinkers

A sober man looked at some liquor the other day.

As a result he is now in the county jail serving a 60-day sentence.

Of course he wasn't arrested for looking at the liquor. He took a drink. He took another drink. He took several drinks.

He had an automobile. He elected to go riding in it. There was a turn in the road. The car didn't recognize the turn.

There was an accident. The man was shaken up but not seriously hurt.

There was an officer. He looked at the automobile. He smelled the man's breath.

There was an arrest. The man was charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

There was a judge. He looked at the man and said, "One hundred dollars and 60 days." The fine meted out was the minimum under the law.

W. C. Abbott, of Klamath Falls, was the man who, a few days ago, looked at some liquor—and who now is serving a 60-day sentence.

thought another man was with them.

SILVERTON, Ore., Aug. 15.— A pair of worn, darned brown cotton socks found in the corner of a graveyard, with blood stains in the feet, was the only thing even approaching a clue Saturday to reveal the whereabouts of Tom Murray, Ellsworth Kelly and James Willis, escaped convicts of the Oregon state prison, whose break caused the death of two guards.

Worthwhile Clue
The socks were found Saturday morning in the lonely burial place in the Union Hills, 10 miles southeast of here, just at the edge of one of the numerous wooded gullies in which the harried possemen believed the fugitives are hiding.

The discovery was made by Edward Bacon, of Portland, one of several men following the detected looking bloodhounds as efforts were being made to get the dogs' noses on a live lead. These might have been the socks worn by one of the three desperadoes. They have been freshly discarded. They might have

Scouring Country
Summing up the results of this day's work by the man hunters the find of hoelery may well be regarded as the high point. Of news as to progress of the man hunters there is none, for none was made.

There was no elimination of territory where it could be established definitely that the men were not, for there was no fine tooth combing of any area. Along the roads and below the crest of commanding ridges the possemen lay all day and others were there tonight.

Men in Timber
They are not at the edges of the roads, but under cover in fringe of the timber and bush, behind fences, sheltered by haystacks or crouching in old cabins or farm out-buildings.

A motorist traveling these roads looking for man hunters might conclude the hunt had been abandoned for he would see none.

PROHI-WHISKEY RUNNERS BATTLE

COLOrado SPRINGS, Colo., Aug.
15.—(United Press)—A spectacular gun battle between Federal Prohibition officers and moonshiners, with a woman fighting with the whiskey makers, took place in the mountains last night near Divide, Colorado, resulting in one moonshiner being killed, officers returning here today, said.

Two of the alleged whiskey makers are in jail at Cripple Creek, a third in jail here, and a fourth escaped.

STORE NEWS

Confidence in the exact fulfillment of your doctor's prescription is absolutely essential to the best results. That consideration is paramount in our service

No one likes to go to a drug store and have the soda clerk grab your prescription and start to work on it. You immediately feel that some one is trying something that they can't put over. That is the very reason why no one touches a prescription that comes into either of our three stores unless he is a college trained and registered pharmacist.

But there is something besides college training that must go into your medicine. The drugs and everything else it contains must be fresh and pure. They can't be kept fresh and be kept on the shelves, they must be bought and used quickly or they lose much of their value. With our three stores to buy for we can order in sufficient quantities to assure the minimum price, and we also know that our three stores will use them up before they become too old.

All in all, there is no better place to buy drugs or sundries than at Currin's For Drugs, Inc.
