"ALL OF FISHING IS NOT CATCHING FISH"

The above title is an opinion expressed by every authority on piscatorial pursuits since the days of Isaack Walton, and is intended to convey the idea that there are other pleasures in the gentle sport than merely haulin' 'em out.

Shorty Blevins of Crescent is the latest convert to this great truth, his conversion being brought about in the following manner:

For some time Shorty has been aware of the fact that a nice, big, fat rainbow made his home in a certain pool in the Upper Deschutes not from from his home in Crescent, and several times he has had a "rise" from the big boy, but has never been able to supply just the proper lure to entice the fish to take a proper hold—that is in Shorty's estimation. It may be the rainbow feels different. A short time ago Blevins figured that a nice little green frog might do the trick. So securing the lure, and attaching it to a good line, he crept cautiously to the bank above the home of the rainbow, gently and quietly lowered his lure to the surface of the water, and was rewarded almost immediately by a vicious strike. But it wasn't the rainbow—it was a full-grown mink. And from then on for the space of an hour or more, Shorty had the time of his life. So firmly was the animal hooked that it was necessary to bring the mink to him, put his foot on its neck, and cut the hook from his lip.

Mrs. Cooper is seen in the hospital. The home from which she was evicted, declared by authorities to be unfit for animals, is shown.
