K. F. Woman First To Enter Sewing In Klamath Fair

To Miss Janice Newby, 555 East Main street, goes the distinction of being the first young woman to exhibit her sewing exhibit to the club work division of the Klamath county fair. This will be the first year that a standard enrollment sewing club has been presented.

Each article presented by Miss Newby, who is 16 years of age, was painstakingly finished and labeled, officials said. She will display a handkerchief case, a sample of darning, a nightgown, a dust cap, an embroidered hand towel and an unlined needle case.

Each girl of the sewing club, division No. 1, must display five completed articles with an account of the cost of material, time spent in making, the approximate cost, and estimated value.

Miss Newby is a member of one of the largest sewing clubs in the county, and its exhibit is always one of the most attractive at the fair.

In the fourth, when four singles, a pass and McManus' circuit clout accounted for four runs.

The other drivers escaped uninjured in the piling up of cars that stopped the race in the 265th lap.

Fetterman was rapidly gaining on Joe Spath of Pittsburgh, driving his Salvador special, when the crash occurred. Spath was awarded the race at the end of the race, and the $1,000 purse.

LABARRA SCORES A CLEAN VICTORY OVER FLY CHAMP

Crowd Cheers As Decision Goes To Los Angeles Youngster

ASCOT ARENA, LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—(United Press)—Fidel Labarra, Los Angeles school boy, won the world's flyweight title here tonight when he defeated Frank Genaro, American flyweight champion in a ten-round fight.

Labarra outboxed Genaro, and had the New York fighter worried throughout the battle with his tricky methods. Labarra took six of the ten rounds, and three were even. Genaro took the second round.

Labarra cut loose in the tenth round, and battered Genaro all over the ring with terrible rights and left hand punches to the head. Up to that time the Los Angeles boy had a fair shade of the fight. His last onslaught left no doubt in the mind of Harry Ertle, of New Jersey, the referee, who immediately raised Labarra's hand in token of victory.

The crowd of 20,000 went wild over the decision, and rushed the ring, crowding around Labarra and shouting their congratulations. The fans appeared to like the decision, and there was no booing.

Genaro, because of his experience, was an 8 to 5 favorite in the betting when he entered the ring, and few of the boxing critics present dared to prophesy a victory for the lad, who had fought only ten professional fights. The crowd, however, were all with Labarra in their cheers.

The new champion graduated from the amateur ranks less than a year ago. He won the world's amateur flyweight championship in the 1924 Olympic games. The title he conquered tonight was left vacant by the death of Pancho Villa in San Francisco several weeks ago, and the fight was approved by the New York boxing commission.

Labarra, by countering with lefts and rights to the body, and by stepping away from Genaro's advances, took the first round on points. Genaro began boxing in the second, and won the round by his aggressiveness. Genaro started the third by chasing Labarra until he became befuddled and dropped his hands to invite Fidel to come on and fight. Labarra surprised him by reaching in with a left hand to the chin and made and whirlwind finish that evened the round.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

By Norman E. Brown

The man who sold himself to the New York Giants will have to turn salesman again if he wants to get back in the big show. He is Frank Walker, outfielder recently sent to Indianapolis by the Giants.

But Walker has had another fling in the big show and has won a measure of fame in various ways. The Athletics and Detroit clubs decided that Walker wasn't a big league outfielder some years ago, and he finally found himself playing with and managing the Rocky Mount team in North Carolina. There he acquired the ownership of the club.

Last winter Walker decided he was ready to return to the big show. So he talked with McGraw, and Jaw, acting on the advices of men who had seen Walker in action last year, offered to sign Walker. So the latter promptly paid himself for his release as a player on his own club, and reported to the Giants, putting the sale price in his own pocket.

Dicky Kerr's return to the White Sox comes too late to worry the Yankees. For nothing can worry that outfit now. What are one or two more bumps to a man who has just gone through a stone crusher? Time was, however, when the return of the tiny one to the White Sox fold—back in 1923 or 1923—would have cast a blanket of gloom over the New York clubhouse. For Kerr, when he was in the big time before, was poison to the Yankees. The quickest way of spoiling an afternoon for the Yankee team, when Kerr was with the Sox before, was to have his name announced for the afternoon frolic. The easterners would start praying for rain, holy-causts or race riots—anything to far put off the evil hours Babe Ruth, of some pumpkins at that time with the bat, had one pet act to pull whenever he faced Kerr. That was to walk up to the plate, look mean, and strike out. Ruth seemed helpless before the little fellow. But now almost anything that was a glove can befuddle the Yankee batters. However, if Kerr gets into his old time swing in a couple of weeks, he may make things interesting for a few other clubs—including the plunging Mackmen.

Carleton Molesworth, manager of the Columbus team of the American association for three years, announced flat-footedly that he would not return as manager of the team next season. This announcement was given to the public just when the Giant officials announced that Hank Gowdy had been given his freedom to accept the management of the Columbus club. Which seemed to settle matters as far as the management of the A. A. team is concerned. However, Molesworth leaves the front office with the good wishes of the Columbus fans. He went to the Ohio capital from the Birmingham club of the Southern Association.
