FAIR WEEK

Klamath to Show Agricultural Merits at the County Fair

Klamath county thinks she has much that no other county and of northern California has. Some of this she show at the county fair next Thursday, Friday and September 3, 4 and 5. The best of her fields, gar-ralleys, the proudest and bluest blooded of her live-be grouped in good natured competition at the. These she shows to the passing throng.

Most important thing, however, that makes the of all this possible, she cannot show—the spirit of. To the casual visitor used to the efficient and fairs and product shows of the big cities, any county seem crude and primitive. But to the thinking looks behind the seeming make-shifts and well-tempts at credible showing and display of their pro-re will be unfolded a story that intrigues. It won't strong imagination to picture back a few years—the Klamath basin before water was on the fer-and gardens that make a succession of checkered m Algoma and Wocus to the Oregon-California state ture the perseverance and hardships of ranching e-bound valleys before good roads flung down their on of progress.

Quality of Klamath's herds has been built with many ment and setback, but the record of pure-bred ered animals shipped into the county dding the attest the pride and foresight of livestock and dairy ld their herds on firm foundations. The almost un-quest for tuberculin testing when the federal in-ciently spent three weeks in the county, is evidence ath livestock men will no longer accept anything but and will safeguard the health of the county's stock, n.

Words of a prominent railroad man who recently e county, Klamath appears the "last frontier"—rail-ways, power, water, and greatest of all, spirit—are inland empire that in a ill return from her pro- vice-president and general manager, and well-fed and cared whose broad, fertile acres near Mer- rill are dotted with pure-bred, ac- credited shorthorns, and fat, full- floeced Hampshire sheep; H. N. Moe, the treasurer of the board, and proprietor of the Woman's Store in Klamath Falls—all give their time and energy to the conduct of the annual county fair, as well as the dam; R. E. Hammond.
