Beware the Germs of the Air

ANY doctor will tell you that a makeshift "window coolers" are a standing invitation to the flying germs of the dust laden air. He will also tell you that this costly risk is certainly not worth the taking when a well iced refrigerator will earn its keep many times over.

Don't take chances with food's purity these cooler days. Protect that food with ice and at the same time protect its value in dollars with the investment of only a few cents a day.

The well iced refrigerator bars germs; the makeshift is their happy hunting ground. And never keep food in an uniced refrigerator. Ask the doctor what he thinks of that kind of "economy". We are here to serve.
