

IN SOCIETY

GYPSY LOVE SONG

No throne to share with thee have I,
And little gold—but the open sky.
And the thrush's song, and the roadside well,
And beads and baubles gypsies sell.

I know you love the market's sound,
Sweeter to me is the warm green
ground
With the soft grass underfoot, and high,
Above, a bowl of gypsy sky.

Cool are the leafy brooks to wade!
Dear is the road, and the gypsy's trade!

The thrush sings by the shady well
And the road's end where a star once fell.

—Ernest Everhard Baker of Los Angeles.

LEVENOI

Over the sea, the night
Silently falling!
Yonder in flight a seagull white.
Calling and calling!
Sea-lure and mystery—
Seawinds in chorus!
Let the day die—a starlit sky
Looms up before us!
