

ASTORIA SLUGGER SIGNED FOR BOUT

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The new Madison Square Garden, which will open on December 11, will be christened by a battle for the light heavyweight title of the world. Announcement was made from Tex Rickard's headquarters that Jack Delaney had been signed to meet Paul Berlenbach, the present light heavyweight champion.

Delaney knocked Berlenbach out in four rounds in the old Madison Square Garden, but that was before the Astoria slugger commenced traveling in championship company.

Berlenbach will visit his brother in Hollywood, Calif., before his bout with King Solomon next Monday night.

Rumors of a Greb-Walker fight were denied by Tex Rickard. He said that Dave Shade, of California, would be given another crack at the welterweight title in preference to Greb.

Auto Race Driver Dies from Injuries

BROWNSWOOD, Texas, Oct. 8.—(United News)—Bud Patnam, Des Moines, race auto driver, who was seriously injured in a collision on the speedway during a racing classic here Wednesday died Thursday afternoon.

Patnam's mother who had come to his bedside by an airplane from Muskogee, Okla., reached his side a few moments before he died.

LOUISVILLE WINS 6

BALTIMORE, Oct. 8.—Before a crowd of 3,966 shivering fans, Wednesday, Louisville trimmed the Orioles by the score of 7 to 1 in the fifth game of the junior world's series.

Red Shannon of the Colonels put his team in the lead by knocking out a homer in the first inning. Malsel scored the only run for the Orioles by hitting a homer in the eighth.

The Colonels have taken three games of the series and the Orioles have triumphed in two.

MILLIONS OF TROUT DISTRIBUTED IN LAKES AND STREAMS BY CROOKED RIVER PLANT

The following table gives the number of rainbow, eastern brook and Loch Leven trout planted in the streams and lakes of the Klamath country up to September 30 of this year by the hatchery crew at the Crooked Creek hatchery and was submitted to the secretary of the Klamath Sportsmen's association by Judge Short, who has represented the association until that date.

In addition to the above there were planted 29,000 at Lake of the Woods by the people who have summer homes there, and who assumed the burden of transporting the fish to that resort, and several other smaller plantings by private parties amounting probably to 10,000 or more.

There still remains at the hatchery approximately 2,000,000 of the various species, most of which will be planted this year at parts of the county. Some 200,000 or 300,000 will be kept at the hatchery until next spring, when they will be liberated. This step is taken in the nature of an experiment, in an endeavor to ascertain whether the larger-sized fish will have a better chance to escape the various dangers which assail small fish when first liberated.

In addition also, to the fish liberated from the Crooked Creek hatchery, 500,000 were liberated in Klamath river from the Spencer Creek hatchery, and another million released in Diamond Lake and that neighborhood from the hatchery at Diamond Lake.

ORIOLES DEFEAT COLONELS 5 TO 3

BALTIMORE, Oct. 8.—The Baltimore Orioles accelerated interest in the junior world series by trimming the Louisville Colonels five to three in the sixth game of the series. The teams are now three victories all, thereby necessitating another game to decide the championship.

Earnshaw pitched the Birds to victory allowing only five scattered hits, while the Louisville team used Holley and Dawson in the box.

Score—	R. H. E.
Louisville	3 5 2
Baltimore	5 9 1

Batteries—Holley, Dawson and Meyers; Earnshaw and Cobb.

SERIES SIDELIGHTS

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 8.—(United News)—Players paid tribute to the late Christy Mathewson before Thursday's game, with each man wearing the black arm band of mourning. The teams lined in single file and marched to the flag pole, where they stood uncovered as the colors were hoisted to half mast and the band played the national anthem.

Vic Aldridge, in warming up, threw nothing but slow curves and then went out and used them successfully against the world champions.

Lee Meadows said before the game that he didn't think he would be able to pitch another game in the series, because of a sore arm, developed from throwing so many curves Wednesday.

The count against Joe Judge was two balls and two strikes, when he hit the first homer of the game.

Washington boasts the two leading hitters of the series. Joe Harris leads with an average of .571, and Sam Rice, who drove in the winning runs Wednesday, when he singled with the bases loaded, follows with .444.

Nick Altrock and Al Schacht worked overtime Thursday. Besides entertaining the bleacher customers in the morning they put on their acts just before the game.

In the third and fourth frames, the Pirates were hitting Covie's first pitch, but only one counted. Wright hit the first spitter he saw for his homer in the fourth.

Peck has never favored the ankle

he sprained some time ago, in the two games of the the series. His misplays, though, may be the result of inactivity. He isn't himself afield.

Bluege showed the 43,364 Pittsburgh citizens present, that there are two crack third basemen in this classic. He made a brilliant stop of Traynor's mile-a-minute grounder in the third.

The first test of Bucky Harris' throwing with his injured finger, came in the first inning Thursday, when he handled Cuyler's hard grounder and made a line snap throw to first.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

The election by the committee of sport writers of the American league cities, of Roger Peckinpaugh as the most valuable man to his club in the league can draw no criticism. There can be no question as to his worth to the champions.

Because he is a fellow townsman of mine and a chap I have known since our high school days the award is doubly pleasing.

But as interesting as was his selection for first honors, the choice of Al Simmons, demon slugger of the Athletics, for second place, is equally as intriguing.

Here is a fellow, dubbed as a joke as a hitter a couple of years ago because of his unorthodox stance at the plate, stepping into the ranks of the "most valuable players." With "one foot in the water bucket" he almost lifted the Athletics to the championship. But for the general breakdown of the team's morale and their woeful base running in their belated slump Simmons might have turned the trick.

As it is, he must be ranked as the outstanding star of Connie Mack's aggregation. It is unfortunate that this courageous gent isn't going to be in the blue ribbon event of baseball.

The present world's series is the first one in five years in which no member of the well known baseball family of the Barneses will be represented. Either Jess or Virgil was on deck each year the Giants participated.

It will be the second world's series in succession for the world's leading baseball clown, Nick Altrock. And with Nick's appearance on the series will arise once more the discussion as to his real value as a member of the team.

Altrock's worth lies not alone in his ability to "draw a crowd." He is the "court jester" of King Harris' retinue. There is no doubt but what he plays an important role in keeping harmony on the club. A pointed jest, a sugared bit of sarcasm, a quiet bit of advice between the "wise cracks"—all have helped to smooth over the rough spots—and kill freshly planted seeds of soreness or discontent.

In addition to this role of peace-maker Altrock lends valuable aid as a coach of pitchers. Altrock, in his bustling days, was a brainy, strategic pitcher. In his years on the sidelines he has kept pace with the new generation of hitters and players in general.

His value can't be measured exactly, but he more than earns his slice of the world's series honey dew.

Watts Gunn, young Atlanta, Ga., zolfing wizard, who gave Bobby Jones a royal battle for the national amateur golf championship, says he learned how to use the midiron when he was seven. Just the age when most of us aspired to be amateur "shiny" champion.

Go by one the "frank" in the various sports are being chronicled. The tennis season is fading out of the picture at this writing. And two things have been definitely established once more—America's supremacy in the net world and Bill Tilden's superiority over little Bill Johnston. France gave America a
