SEPARATION OF PAIR ENDS LIFE

Aged Wife Could Not Live Believing Crippled Husband Cold

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Six years ago, Hubert Anchoin, 74, left his aged wife "because he did not want to be a burden on her." He was a paralytic, and was forced to use a wheel chair.

Despite the fact that each day Anchoin would drag himself to his wife's home for breakfast and a little chat, she believed that he had deserted her because he did not love her any longer.

Today Anchoin labored up to his wife's residence, as usual. He found her dead, presumably a suicide by gas. She left a note stating that she could no longer stand estrangement from her husband.

Woman Collapses As Meets Husband

HAPPY LIVES RUINED

William Turner, Ex-Miner Leaves New York to Fight for Life

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—(United Press)—A woman today paid the price for having returned to her husband whom she had thought dead.

Mrs. Margaret M. Turner was the woman, and the husband was William M. Turner, once a respected mine foreman at McCarr, Ky., and now accused of having blown up the mine and killed two men.

After the explosion Turner was missing. Mrs. Turner mourned over the body of one of the two laborers killed, and gave it burial, thinking it was her husband.

Then she collected $20,000 of the insurance Turner had carried—his policies were said to have totalled $85,000—put on widow's weeds, and moved with her five children to Trenton, N. J., there to rear her children, and to try to forget the scenes of her husband's supposed death.

Over in Trenton they lived quietly and happily—but two days ago Turner came back. He came not to see his family, but to go to a prison cell, and be charged with murder.

Today Mrs. Turner summoned up her courage and came to police headquarters—to see again the man she had loved in her youth; who was the father of her family, and on whose grave she had poured her tears.

With steady step she walked into the offices of Police Capt. James Higgins. There Turner was awaiting her.

Her courage began to fail.

Wildly she threw herself into her husband's arms.

"Oh! My God. Why did you do this to me?" she cried. "We were happy. We had our children!"

She could say no more and soon collapsed. Her husband was led away to a waiting automobile, taken to a railway station, and sped off for Kentucky to stand trial.

WAITRESSES GIVE ANALYSIS OF CHARACTER TREND OF MEN WITH WHOM THEY MEET DAILY

In Klamath Falls it isn't the meticulously vested gentleman with the ounce diamond sparklers on three pudgy fingers who draws the attention of the comely young waitress whose table she will soon find it necessary to attend.

In Klamath Falls it usually isn't the logger, clad in "lin" pants who offers the alleged scintillating repartee, the outcome of which is commonly an attempt to arrange a meeting about five minutes after the apron has been put away for the night.

And, incidentally, waitresses in Klamath Falls are subjected to but few indignities.

At least such were the observations yesterday of local waitresses who have worked in restaurants and cafes in various cities of the country. They declared that, with the exceptions of outbursts from occasional drunks, they are accorded respect.

"It isn't the well-to-do patron who usually leaves the tips either,"

WARDENS TRY OUT PURE WATER CURE

Authorities Experiment In Effort to Find Out What Ails Tule Ducks

Experiments, based upon a theory that possibly poisoning of ducks in the Tule lake region, has been caused by polluter water, are being tried out by George Tonkin, U. S. game warden for the district of California, Marion Barnes, deputy state game warden of Oregon, and M. E. Arnold, who is here accompanying Mr. Tonkin. Based upon a belief that water is the cause of killing and rendering ill, thousands of ducks in the Tule lake region, the game authorities have secured about 50 of the sick birds and are now keeping them in absolutely fresh, pure water.

Yesterday a 12-hour experiment, it was announced that, while one out of fifty died, the others seemed to be improving. Ducks experimented on in this manner, will be branded, and efforts made to trace them.

"Our experiments seem to indicate that the ducks apparently become better when taken away from the Tule lake water," said the game authorities yesterday afternoon.

It is suggested, however, that hunters stay away from the Tule lake region until the water freezes, or that reports are received from the chemists, who have been asked to make tests of the ducks' condition, in hope of determining cause of their ailment. Both live and dead fowl are being tested by col-

COOLIDGE TAKES UP PLAN FOR NEW ARMS LIMIT MEET

Senator Fess Father of Proposal

INTRUSION AVOIDED

Secretary of State Declares Europe Only Can Settle European Problems

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—President Coolidge took under consideration tonight a plan for calling a new Washington conference on limitation of European land armaments, presented to him by Senator Simeon D. Fess, republican, Ohio.

Though the president is not expected to act favorably on the Fess proposal, he let it be known that the Locarno security pact has revived his hopes for another naval limitation conference here.

Officials close to Mr. Coolidge said he would take no steps which could be considered by European governments as an intrusion by the United States into the distinctly European affairs. He does not intend to interfere with land disarmament plans of the league of nations since this country has nothing further to offer in the way of army reduction, it is understood.

Secretary of State Kellogg and former Secretary of State Hughes, have advised the president that European countries only can settle European questions, the chief of which is land armaments.

The senator told the president that the United States should assume moral leadership in achieving European land disarmament, which could not readily be secured at an European conference in the midst of national fears and animosities.

Fess also feels that the United States cannot reduce its army more but thinks this should not prevent it from acting as host to an European conference meeting in Washington.

4 PERSONS ARE REPORTED LOST IN FIRE AT SEA

Passenger Liner Is Scene of Blaze

150 SOULS ON BOARD

Late Advices Indicate That Number of Those on List Among Missing

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 15.—(Sunday)—Four women were drowned following destruction by fire of the Clyde line passenger steamer Commanche Saturday night, according to stories of survivors.

The four women lost their lives when two lifeboats carrying them from the burning steamer crashed in the darkness.

At an early hour Sunday a careful check was under way to determine if more lives were lost. Reports which could not be confirmed said at least ten went down in the crash of life boats.

Capt. Edward E. Curry of the Commanche reported no lives were lost but rescued passengers maintained that at least four and possibly ten or more were drowned.

The Commanche caught fire from a pile of lumber in the engine room, 15 miles off Mayport, near here, at the mouth of the St. John's river. Efforts by the crew and passengers to extinguish the blaze failed and soon the ship was a blazing hulk.

The tanker Reaper and the Clyde vessel Ozark responded to the Commanche's S. O. S. radio calls and rushed to the aid of the distressed vessel. They succeeded in removing all members of the crew and the passengers, who had taken to lifeboats.

Capt. Curry reported to H. G. White, general agent of the Clyde line here after he landed at Mayport, that the vessel carried only 55 passengers and a crew which had been variously reported at between 82 and 100.

The Commanche had made less than 40 miles on her voyage to New York for which port she put out of Jacksonville at 4 p. m. today.

A message early today said the Reaper and the Ozark would reach Jacksonville later this morning with the survivors.

ALL REPORTED SAVED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Coast guard headquarters and the naval communications here received reports that all aboard the steamer Commanche were saved.

Transfer of the passengers from the burning ship to the tanker Reaper was made without accident, a wireless message to the coast guard said, but no check-up of the passenger list has yet been made.

The Comanche burned to the water and is a total loss.
