

KLAMATH BRAVES ISSUE CALL TO COUNCIL OF WAR

trems, and that it is so maintained to make jobs for office holders. This condition makes for extravagance and that it should not cost the government more than one-tenth the $150,000 now expended to administer their affairs, is their contention.

A charge of this nature, the Indians believe, will make a big noise at Washington where there is a gentleman who has already gained a considerable reputation for saving money. Recently the Indians sent a delegation to interview Senators McNary and Stanfield, and it is said they are calling the meetings at Chiloquin and Betty in response to instructions from the senators.

The immediate grievance of the Indians is that the young bucks are paid in full their allotments of money from sale of timber lands, while the Indian agent refuses to pay the old bucks more than a small portion of the allotment.

Young Bucks Spend

The young bucks are able to work and they spend their allotments in riotous living for the most part, having a strong inclination toward automobiles and fire water. The old bucks, and their squaws, on the other hand, direly need the money to purchase food. Some pitiful stories are told of the condition of the old Indians.

One blind and hungry Indian, helped into a store, was unable to obtain credit for food, the $20 a month out of several hundred dollars held at the agency being insufficient to maintain him and his woman. It is related by the Indians. There is another story told of four Indian children who are allowed only $40 a month out of $50,000 held in trust for them by the Indian Agency. It is said they are often short of food.

Back of all the minor grievances of the Klamath Indians is, however, their desire to escape the present policy of "bureaucratic paternalism." The only necessity for continuance of the present policy is to maintain jobs for office holders, they say.

"The government says that we are no longer wards, but are American citizens since the war, when we were drafted the same as the white men, but we are citizens in name only." is the consensus of their opinion. And the tribesmen are gathering to formulate ways and means of stressing their demands for full rights at Washington.

Fred Hendricks, Klamath Indian delegate, is calling the meetings. All members of the tribes of the Klamath reservation as well as members of the tribal council are urged to be present. "This meeting is one of considerable importance to the Klamath Indians," said printed dodgers, now used by the Indians in calling their gatherings. Instead of smoke signals and messengers, the dodgers were posted throughout the reservation today.

of deceased soldiers. Their tentative plans also will call for an arch over the cemetery with an engraved plaque. The trees, the species to be decided later, may be planted in an avenue the length of the cemetery or planted as a border or in groups. This will be decided later when a committee from Rotary meets with other groups.

Fairview school district was discussed last night and Mrs. H. W. Bathiany placed in charge of the districts west of Crescent avenue and north of the canal.

Michigan avenue district and Esplanade from the canal to the White Pelican hotel will also be canvassed and reports made later. The person in charge will be announced later.

dition was favorably discussed by the committees present last night and from Michigan avenue to Sixth street will be planted by mutual consent of the residents. This section of the city will especially be stressed as East Main street has been designed as the main entrance into Klamath Falls. If the proposed design is carried through that drive to the city will be beautified in a fitting manner.

An additional program will be opened in the Oregon avenue district from the Shippington road into the dividing signs of the Dallas-California highway.

With the completion of the committees in charge of these newly discussed districts final announcements will be made as to the type of trees to be planted along the various streets of the city.

Howard In from Hatchery—Harry Howard spent yesterday in the city disposing of his fish for market from a private fish hatchery above Chiloquin.
