DARTMOUTH SET TO SLAM CHICAGO

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 11.—Out of the east a great green avalanche which has crushed all opposition on nearby gridirons this season, moved down upon Chicago Wednesday night. Dartmouth football squad, with all the regulars intact entrained for Flint, Mich., where Jesse Hawley's men will stop off for a workout before the big intersectional game with the Maroons on Saturday.

Towering among his comrades, giant "Swede" Oberlander, around whom the Dartmouth running and passing attack will revolve, looked the picture of health as he had to take a final "curtain call" from an enthusiastic student body. Hanoverans look to the star half back to clinch his claim to all-American honors by an outstanding performance in the Chicago game.

Dartmouth sent the team away highly confident of victory over Coach Alonzo Stagg's eleven. Thirty-four players, coaches and trainers were in party, which started west. Hawley said the line-up against the Maroons would be the one which faced and effaced Cornell last Saturday. Tulley has recovered from his injuries and will be at left end.

Throughout the east, Dartmouth men are rallying verbally and financially to the support of the team and are offering so much money on the outcome that the green certainly will be a 2 to 1 favorite by game time.

RED GRANGE MAY BE CONGRESSMAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 11—United News —Harold "Red" Grange, the gargantuan of the grid iron whose name is "Writ" in touchdowns at the university of Illinois, may be sent to congress next year.

Nominating petitions appeared in Chicago Wednesday to place Grange's name on the Republican ballot at the primary, April 13, for nomination as a congressman at large to represent the state of Illinois.

Illinois elects two congressmen at large because of the refusal of the legislature to redistrict the state into new congressional districts since the reapportionment of 1901.

The admirers of "Red" are legion and they predict that some day the redoubtable half back will be tackling the problems of the nation.

Sports Done Brown

The recent gridiron battle between the universities of Michigan and Illinois presents much food for thought.

Of late years the frequency with which substitutions are made in a given grid game has increased noticeably. Knute Rockne, wonder mentor of Notre Dame, finally simplified this growing practice, as far as his 1924 team was concerned, by having two complete elevens ready for the fray. The first team sent into the game consisted merely of "shock" troops, and remained in long enough to gain for the regulars some idea of the type of play that must be faced.

Various critics have pointed out from time to time that the open game—with its dash and drain on the endurance—has demanded these frequent substitutions.

Then Michigan, bent upon a Big Ten title, invades Urbana to play the Illini. Now Illinois is fighting with its back to the wall to maintain its grid prestige, the last chapter of which was written around Red Grange.

The teams battled through an afternoon of mud, slush and gray haze to a 3 to 0 score. And just eleven men were used by each coach!

Both teams trotted off the field as they had trotted on. Of course Fate's kindness in leaving them free from the ordinary grid casualties played a part in this achievement. But very few of the many substitutions made in the ordinary game are suggested by injuries to participants. Most substitutes are sent in as offensive and defensive strategy moves.

All of which might well be said to hang the title of "bunk" on the modern practice.

CANCER PROBLEM IS WITHIN GRASP DECLARE EXPERTS

Copyright 1925 by United News

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 12.—Revelations concerning the nature of cancer and the apparent effectiveness of a new treatment employing lead, were made in an answer before the Toronto Academy of Medicine Tuesday night by Dr. W. Blair Bell, noted Liverpool surgeon and university professor.

An investigation begun by Dr. Bell 17 years ago and during the last three years carried on under his direction by the Liverpool cancer research committee with a staff of nearly 30 experts in many branches of science, is behind this report. In its striking evidence is produced that an explanation of cancer has been found and a method of treatment formulated that "places the solution of the cancer problem within grasp," according to Dr. Bell, "if indeed it has not already been accomplished."

"There probably is no specific cause of cancer but hundreds of causes" Bell declared. "It is the cancer itself that is a specific growth process."

Bell is one of the leading surgeons of Great Britain. He is an authority on several branches of surgery and has been honored many times with scholarships, prizes and medals. Consequently the results of his cancer research are not likely to be impeached. He has served as honorary director of the Liverpool cancer research committee. Indications of the progress of the investigation have appeared from time to time since 1922 but Bell's announcement is based on the practically complete report of the committee. Bell's address will be published in the Lancet, the British medical journal, later this week.

Bell asserts his investigations have been proved.

First that cancer is a definite condition of growth taking place in the cells affected.

Second, that this process is not unlike certain normal processes of growth, but lacking the control that checks normal cell growth, at the right point.

Third, that in finding a substance to check this unrestrained growing of the cells a cure would be found for cancer.

Fourth, that lead is such a substance.

Lead, therefore, furnishes basis of the treatment which Prof. Bell and his collaborators have worked out.

The fact that they found early in their research that among chemists, plumbers and other workers with lead, cancer was a rare or unknown disease, is only one of the interesting considerations that led them to try it in the treatment of cancer, Prof. Bell's address brought out.

Cancer today ranks as the greatest cause of death for those past middle life and its appalling death rate apparently is on the increase in nearly all civilized countries.
