LOCAL CATTLE BEST ON COAST

California Stockmen Visit County to Replenish Southern Markets

That the Pacific coast market is looking to Klamath for cattle is not a mere myth but a reality that Klamath stockmen are grasping with great rapidity, is the claim laid by prominent stockmen of California, who are spending some time looking into livestock conditions in Klamath this week.

J. A. Robinson, one of the largest stock owners in Merced county, California, arrived in Klamath Falls last night, looking toward the Klamath ranges for stock cattle to replenish his depleted herds. With the hoof and mouth disease ravaging through the cattle in California last year Robinson lost 3,000 head of fine stock. It is to Klamath that he has come to replenish that stock which he has lost.

Another prominent stock buyer is Johnny Allen of the Allen & Pyle company of San Francisco. According to Allen the Klamath stock is in the finest condition of any stock on the coast and buyers first turn toward Klamath when they think of marketing.

In other words stockmen all along the Pacific coast are keen on Klamath cattle.

Robinson shipped from southern Oregon through Alturas yesterday several thousand head to his own range. While in Klamath he plans to buy several thousand more head of stock cattle.

It was while he was discussing stock with Klamath stockmen that he said W. C. Dalton of Malin, once "punishers" on the Ruddle ranch in Merced met again. Both are members of the California Cattle Growers association.

According to Dalton Klamath is well cleaned of her stock this year and importations will be resorted to in order to feed on the bumper crop of hay that filled the fields this fall.

OLD LANDMARK BRINGS $6500

Dr. George H. Merryman, Klamath Falls physician, has purchased from C. H. Knowles, 142 feet facing Main street, near Center, for a consideration of $6500. The deed was filed in the office of the county clerk yesterday afternoon.

The land is one of the famous old landmarks of Linkville, the original city of Klamath Falls. It faces the Main street for 142 feet, and the frontage is near Center street.

What Dr. Merryman plans to do with the land is not known, as he could not be reached last night.

For some time the land has proven valuable as a quarry, and the dirt and rocks carried away gradually to street level, from what was once a high cliff.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 18.—(United News)—Nearly every survivor of the ill-fated Clyde liner Lenape, which is burning at Lewes, Del., had a tale of terror to tell as the passengers arrived here on board a special train from Lewes. Most of them will continue on to their destinations in Florida by rail.

The only death from the disaster was that of Robert Leverton, Wil-Hamansett, Mass., who was drowned as he jumped from the ship. Several were injured.

Capt. D. C. Devereaux, commander of the Lenape, related tersely how he brought his ship to safety.

"The passengers were not excited," he said. "They behaved as if they had been called on deck to have their pictures taken."

"The fire was first discovered at 4:55 about 50 miles out of Lewes. The passengers were awakened and all steam was put on to get inside Delaware breakwater. S. O. S. sig-

While searching for some method of curing himself from the narcotic habit, Dubry stumbled upon the remedy years ago, he said. The two brothers-under-the-skin, Rear Admiral William S. Sims, retired, and Col.
