...the principal cities of the United States and is unanimously acclaimed as one of the best of our European acquisitions.

While on a recent concert tour of the United States, these popular artists had the unique experience of flying by aeroplane from one of their concert dates in Oklahoma to another, a distance of 40 miles.

They arrived safely in time for their recital, but on the return trip they were caught in a terrific electrical storm. They were up in the air all night, exposed to the elements, as the aviator could not find his way, owing to the extreme blackness of the night.

The artists were told afterwards by the aviator that they were indeed fortunate to have escaped with their lives, and they had several narrow escapes from running into houses. It is also fortunate that they did not contract pneumonia from such exposure, as they were literally drenched, and their evening gowns and slippers ruined.

On this occasion the artists also witnessed the terrific hail storm which caused so much damage in Oklahoma at that time. They were on their way on a train to fulfill one of their concert engagements when the storm broke. The hailstones were so large and fell with such force that they shattered every window in the train, causing much alarm among the passengers, as the broken glass fell in showers upon them.

Upon arrival at their destination the artists found that the automobile which has been sent for them had been out in storm, and they were able to count 33 holes in its top.

So you see, the life of a concert artist is not a particularly safe one.

12,000 Armenians Rendered Homeless

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—United News—Funds and food are needed for Christian refugees in Syria, who have been rendered homeless as a result of the Druse rising against the French, according to a report from Beirut to the local offices of the near east relief.

Approximately 12,000 Armenians who were living in several refugee camps around Damascus have fled to safer regions, the report states. The situation is desperate, but the major part are concentrated in large groups in various parts of the country side, clustered around Armenian churches or schools without shelter or food. Few of the refugees were able to bring away either extra clothing or food.

The near east relief investigators visited Sidon and Aleppo in addition to Damascus.

Sidon was reported quiet since the arrival of a French warship although rebel forces are operating within 20 miles of the city.

"The American relief organization," it was stated, "has 1200 children at Sidon, of whom 1100 are less than 14 years of age. It also has eight American personnel at this point, and 72 native employees with 400 dependents, all of whom must be evacuated in case of an attack on the city."

Wireless communication is maintained between New York and Sidon by the near east relief but the "only news received in the past 24 hours was a message announcing the birth of a girl, weight 8 pounds, to the American orphanage directors Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Horn of Topeka, Kas."

DIRIGIBLE PROBE TO BE HELD OVER

Captain Paul Foley Freed of Attempted Coercion By Navy Court

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—(United News)—Called into session after a month's recess to consider the sensational charges of Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne, the Shenandoah inquiry court will continue as an unofficial cross-examining body in connection with the prosecution of Col. William Mitchell.

This became known late Friday, when the court announced that it would convene again Monday morning. The announcement filed followed four hours of withering examination of Capt. E. P. Clark, army air officer of Langley field, Va., who testified during the morning as a defense witness for Col. Mitchell.

The Shenandoah court completed its investigation of Mrs. Lansdowne's accusations Friday by completely exonerating Capt. Paul Foley, former judge advocate of the inquiry, whom Mrs. Lansdowne had charged with attempting to influence her testimony.

The charges against Capt. Foley had been made by Mrs. Lansdowne in the Mitchell court martial, subsequent to their appearance in newspapers. Mrs. Lansdowne was called before the Shenandoah court and subjected to a most intensive cross-questioning without the aid of counsel. This was also true in the case of Maj. Frank Kennedy, of McCook field, Ohio, who appeared in Mitchell's defense to tell that he believed that the Shenandoah's gas cells burst, partially because some of the filling sleeves were tied shut.

Capt. Clark, who claimed considerable knowledge of lighter-than-air craft, maintained in the face of a strenuous examination Friday that a good proportion of those who were killed in the Shenandoah disaster could have been saved had the dirigible been adequately equipped with parachutes. He held that three or four of the men in the control cabin would have been alive today had they been provided with parachutes. He felt sure, he said, that Lieutenant Shepperd, who, it was believed was thrown to his death when the airship broke in two, could have been saved.

Capt. Clark placed the blame for the lack of parachutes with the navy bureau of aeronautics.

For long hours the navy officers of the court shot questions at Capt. Clark, apparently attempting to belittle his knowledge of aeronautics, and to discredit his testimony. During this warm session even Admiral Hilary P. Jones, president of the court, lost his temper.

Reorganization of Scouts Is Effected

Reorganization of the scout troop, No. 1 of Bonanza, was held in the Bonanza school at 7:30 p. m. Thursday night with Scout Executive Everett O. Nord in charge of the meeting.

Others present from Klamath Falls were Julius Mueller and L. E. Banker, scout leaders and interested in the scout movement throughout Klamath county.

Visitors during the meeting included J. O. Hamaker and R. R. Lytle of Bonanza, who had been previously appointed troop committeemen.

James Luebke and C. A. Keller of the troop of Bonanza have been appointed as members of the Scout Leader's association. Fourteen scouts were present for the meeting and received instructions in scout drill fundamentals and knot tying.

RACIAL CASE IS AGAIN POSTPONED

Letters Flabbergast Lawyer Defending Rhinelander Against Negro Wife

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 20.—(United News)—The element of suspense which entered the sensational Rhinelander annulment trial Thursday afternoon has been prolonged over the week-end, and each moment, if you ask those who are following the trial and reading all the letters, becomes very tense.

The trial has been adjourned until Monday, at the request of Leonard Kip Rhinelander's counsel, and while the full reason behind the request is not discernible, it is apparent that a crisis has arisen because of the possession by Mrs. Alice Jones Rhinelander's counsel of a couple of Leonard Kip's letters, which are likely to prove the super-sensation of the odorous evidence presented by both sides.

Existence of these letters seems to have flabbergasted the plaintiff's lawyers, who had been told nothing about them by Leonard Kip.

Guesses and rumors as to the contents of the two letters are numerous, and for the most part unprintable. Judge Isaac Mills, head of Leonard Kip's counsel, insists the annulment suit will not be withdrawn Monday, but he admitted that an emergency had arisen which could only be met by a re-investigation of his own case.

It was rumored around the court room after adjournment that Mrs. Rhinelander had been offered $300,000 to withdraw her defense. No one confirmed it.
