I can feel no pride, but pity
For the burdens the rich endure;
There is nothing sweet in the city,
But the patient lives of the poor.
O, the little hands too skillful,
And the child mind choked with
weeds,
The daughter's heart grown wild,
And the father's heart that bleeds.
No, no, from the street's rude
bustle,
From trophies of mart and stage,
I would fly to the wood's low
rustle,
And the meadow's kindly page,
Let me dream as of old by the river.

And be loved for the dream always,
For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.
"The Dreamer," by John
Boyle O'Reilly.

THANKSGIVING DAY APPROACHING

There are certain days on the year's calendar which are circled with red, and others are of such national importance that they are printed in bolder colors in order to imprint upon memories the festive seasons.

On Thursday of this week the feast of feast days arrives. A box of goodies is packed for the boys and girls in college who are unable to return for the Thanksgiving holidays. Grandmother's home is the Mecca for children and grandchildren, great-grandchildren and the homeless ones who live near.

Hotel guests are perhaps the ones who suffer most. They are far from home and a room in the hotel seems far less cheerful than a blazing grate where the toes are warmed before a friendly fire. The lobby of the hotel isn't so gracious as it might be, the menu in the dining room seems far less inviting than the board of pumpkin pies and home prepared turkey. "Like mother used to make."
