ate reading of the developed horsepower for every minute of the long grind.

The motors were started simultaneously and with wide open throttles. They were kept running at top speed until they broke down, either through over-heating, wear on the moving parts, or sheer inability to stand the severe pace.

At the end of the first seven days of running, only a few of the original entrants were still running.

At the end of the ten days, the superiority of the Knight motor was so convincingly demonstrated that there was no doubt in the minds of the engineers who had watched the entire test.

For the full 240 hours, the Knight motor steadily delivered its full 550 horsepower without a fluctuation in the indicating dial. At the end of the run it was shut off. Then, without adjustments of any kind, was immediately started again, and when the throttle was opened up, it showed the full 550-horsepower without the slightest sign that it has been deteriorated in the slightest by the run.

Power is an outstanding feature of this car with the motor you cannot wear out

COMPRESSION—hermetically sealed in the cylinders by the sleeve construction—gives a "Pop" to the Willys-Knight motor that will surprise you. There are never any burned, pitted, warped valves to let the "life" of the motor run out in unburned gases.

COOLING—so efficient that you can hold the throttle wide open, hour after hour, without the slightest sign of heating, gives you a day in and day out ability that simply does not exist in other cars.

SILENCE—as a result of the entire absence of valve mechanism, lifter rods, rocker arms, valve stems and noisy cams tapping against noisy machinery makes this car so quiet in operation that you scarcely realize that the motor is turning over.

ECONOMY—obtained through proper cooling, the elimination of fuel waste through valve mechanism, the absence of the heavy load of valve springs to detract from the usable power, gives you a fuel and oil mileage that is a distinct revelation.

ABILITY—beyond that of any other motor in the world—proved by a Knight motor in tests conducted by the Government of France—240 hours steady running in which the Knight motor won hands down over all others—demonstrated in the grueling Yosemite cooling tests—the 100 hour Big Bear Lake test—and hailed by every Willys-Knight owner who swears that his individual car is the best one ever made.

THESE FEATURES—alone—are enough to bring you into the honor roll of 250,000 present users of Willys-Knight cars who represent the most satisfied group of motor enthusiasts in the world.

ADD TO THEM—the present low prices, the present beautiful lines, and the acknowledged continued high value of your Willys-Knight car and further search for the motor car perfection in the service features you require, is useless.
