DAILY MARKET QUOTATIONS

PORTLAND, Dec. 1.—Trade in wool here is marking time awaiting the sale of the 2,000,000 pounds of Idaho stock to be offered at terminal No. 4 a week from today. Reports in the trade now are that a special arrangement has been made with steamship officials to take out this wool to the Atlantic coast, if sold there. This has been the stumbling block in the trade here, although at the moment the trade is stilled somewhat by the lower prices ruling in South America and Australia. Buyers from the east and mill representatives are expected to be present. Messages to local dealers confirm such lowering of foreign prices. The Idaho sales here are expected to be the pendulum which will swing values either higher or lower than the present level.

DEMPESE UPSET BY FIGHT RUMOR

Agrees That Will Fight Be Held in Chicago Instead Of Indiana

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.—Jack Dempsey, the heavyweight champion, has become stampeded over the rumor that there is a movement to "sell out" the much heralded world championship fight between him and Harry Wills scheduled for some time and somewhere next year with Floyd Fitzsimmons doing the promoting.

Jack "rushed" a telegram Tuesday to Paddy Mullins, manager of Wills as follows:

"Understand some persons are going to New York to negotiate with you regarding my match with Wills. No one is authorized to act for me and Floyd Fitzsimmons alone must be considered as the promoter unless he violates agreement made by him and not South Bend people, who must be repudiated under existing conditions. Our agreement and signatures were to Fitzsimmons and mine."

Dempsey referred to the financial backers at South Bend, Ind. He believes they are seeking to have the match underwritten by a group of Chicago promoters and propose to gain Mullin's consent to a change in the agreement, which will take the fight out of Indiana to Chicago.

Dempsey added that he didn't mind fighting in Chicago—in fact he predicted that the fight would probably be held there—but he intends that Fitzsimmons shall control the match.

PRO FOOTBALL IS RAISING STORM

Eastern Grid Coaches Deplore Drift From Amateur Athletics

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—"Red" Grange will discover another difference between collegiate and professional football this coming weekend, when his team, the Chicago Bears, plays three games in four days.

As every one knows, college teams are limited to one game a week, but professionals "barn storm" about wherever the cash box jingles and the turn-stiles click. "Red" of course is getting paid by the game and so can have no objection to making frequent appearances. The Bears play at Philadelphia Saturday, New York Sunday and Washington on the following Tuesday.

What this means is that those who pay their money to see Grange at his best may not do so. The youngster, despite his ice-wagon training, is not made of iron, and was taking things easy—sparing himself—and incidentally will not play through these games, but will appear in perhaps two periods.

The game next Sunday at the Polo Grounds when the Bears meet the Giants, is causing more attention than did any college game this year. It is the supply of tickets is practically exhausted, and the speculators who have been laying off duty since the Army-Navy game are making ready for another killing.

Speaking at a dinner Monday night Tad Jones, Fielding Yost, and Kaute Rockne deplored the effects of professional football upon the college game, saying it created too strong an incentive to individual brilliancy and "grandstand" play.

The Notre Dame coach told some amusing stories of professional football in the old days, when the players did not come out of a scrimmage and ask "what's the score?" but "what's the gate?"

Sports Done Brown

By NORMAN E. BROWN

Boxing commissions of three states in this union of ours have it well in mind to get the ring back to the old days, when the players did not come out of a scrimmage and ask "what's the score?" but "what's the gate?"

I don't mean one of these reforms that starts with cutting down the number of $1 tickets and ends up with getting some white enameled buckets for the ring.

I mean a reform that will have these emphatic results:

Force champions to fight in defense of their titles or abdicate officially and seriously.

Force champions to fight under reasonable conditions when they do perform.

And force promoters and managers to accept such reasonable terms as will bring admission prices down within the range of the average fan's pocketbook.

The three states referred to are New York, New Jersey and California.

Each one of these states has a well organized, efficient boxing commission, given unlimited powers in arranging its code and enforcing its rules and edicts.

These states form the three most important centers of boxing. They are the ones in which the "big money" fights are being held.

These are the three leading ones in which boxing is legalized and therefore under open supervision.

They have already placed their shoulders to the wheel by taking unified action along one line—that of passing a rule which forces all champions participating in championship bouts to make the legitimate weight for the battle.

New York adopted such a rule when the boxing commission, as it now operates, was formed. California, when it legalized boxing a year or so ago injected the same rule into its regulations.

And New Jersey's commission joined the two by enacting such legislation in time to force Mickey Walker to make the welterweight limit for his bout with Friedman.

This weight rule, if eventually enforced nationally, would automatically force champions to fight, frequently to keep their weight, enter a higher class, as a contender, or retire.

Benny Leonard would have been forced to forego the pastime of fiddling with lightweight hopefuls some years ago had this rule then been enforced. Harry Greb would not have fared as well as he has, perhaps, had he been forced to hold to the middleweight limit of 160 pounds in his important fights.

Why don't these commissions improve each shining moment?
