day. "I have information that casts strong reflection on federal prohibition and New York police forces as well as additional coast guardsmen, and these reports will be thoroughly investigated."

Dwyer and a score of others, including six coast guardsmen, already have been arrested. A confession obtained from one of the guardsmen is said by Buckner to reveal the actual participation of coast guard cutters in landing the liquor.

Officers Fixed

This confession implicates the officers of the cutter, who hitherto had been believed innocent of lending their services to the ring. It is said to charge that the officers each received, $1,000 and each man of the crew, $240 for their work in landing the cargo of liquor.

When asked whether police and prohibition agents were actually involved in the evidence, Buckner maintained that rum running had been going on almost unhindered over the principal Long Island roads and recalled that a memorandum found on Philip Coffey, alleged chief "fixer" for the ring, listed, $4,400 for "road expenses."

Buckner also said that a witness had quoted Dwyer as saying "it was as easy to land liquor at North river piers as it was to land tomatoes."

RECALL SESSION NOW IMPROBABLE

"Ma" Ferguson Escapes Recall Session Owing to Scarcity of Funds

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 5.—The death knell of a special legislative session was believed sounded today in a decision handed down by Attorney General Dan Moody, who ruled that financing or underwriting expenses of the home of representatives for such purpose was "unwarranted and unauthorized."

Speaker Lee Satterwhite had asked the attorney general to make a ruling on the question of the legality of a privately financed session of the legislature. Due to a lack of funds in the state treasury for the purpose of legislative sessions and a state ruling that appropriation for a special session cannot be voted until the succeeding regular session the question of paying the members who assembled loomed as a stumbling block.

The proposition of loaning funds to individual members was presented by state citizens.

FOOT HEALTH TALKS:

Weak and Flat-Foot

"An army has to go on its feet, and its capacity for action is limited by the capacity of the feet of the men to function. A breaking down of the arches of the foot, flat-foot, is the commonest cause of disfunction, and, therefore, the most serious single obstacle in the formation of an effective army from men in civil life."—"Foot Defects in Drafted Men," War Department, U. S. Surgeon General's Office, 1920. Weak feet is like a bar to one hundred percent efficiency in civil life. Said what Dr. Scholl, noted foot orthopedist of Chicago, has to say in today's article.

By WILLIAM M. SCHOLL, M. D.

Flat planus, flat-foot or broken down arch, is the most frequent of all serious foot troubles, and is responsible for much physical weakness, discomfort and unhappiness. It was the commonest defect among men of draft age. It is even more frequent among the entire civilian population than among vigorous young men within the military age limits. When neglected it is frequently found to be the origin of serious bodily ailments.

A lapse of years may intervene between the first evidences of arch strain or weak foot and the fully developed case of acquired flat-foot. Arch weakness may develop from excessive use of the foot, from carrying heavy weights, from occupational causes such as those which require long standing with infrequent change of position, from the sudden change from flat to high heels, from the improper fitting of shoes or improper shoes, as a result of illness, syphilitic disease or other causes. The man who subjects his feet to great strain by the constant lifting of heavy burdens and the man who does not exercise sufficiently to develop strong muscles to resist strain are examples of extremes in wrong use of the feet.

The early stages of weak foot are by far the most prevalent. In the early stage there may be only a slight change in the structure when weight is placed upon the foot, and this condition is usually due to ligamentous causes. There is an abnormal laxity of the ligaments which permits the weight of the body, as it is carried upon the foot, to depress the longitudinal arch and to cause a slight abduction of the foot. With the ligamentous structures weakened, the muscles and connecting tendons are unable to function to the extent of supporting the normal relative position of the bone structures.

Acute weak foot is often characterized by pain and sensitiveness. There may be a burning sensation on the ball of the foot. The patient may complain of the toes feeling cramped, or of a swelling through the ankle, or aches in the calves and general fatigue and weariness after much standing or walking. Complaint is made that the shoes do not feel as comfortable as they should regardless of fitting; again the patient may complain more of weak ankle than of pain; walking is dispensed with as much as possible and shoes are soon crowded out of shape owing to the spreading tendency of the structures of the foot.

When weak foot is due to systemic disease or bodily weakness, the case should be at once referred to the family physician. In most cases, however, if not too far progressed the trouble can be corrected by gradually restoring the arch to normal by surgical plates or arch supports which are fitted to the individual foot and progressively altered to keep pace with restoration. The success of these devices depends greatly upon their application, and intelligent selection, fitting and adjustment, as well as advice to the patient regarding their wearing. Gentle exercises to tone up and strengthen the muscles are helpful. Properly fitted shoes and stockings must be worn.

The first object in mind in weak foot in its various stages and flat-foot is to restore the foot structure to normal position. The natural movements of the foot must be restored and maintained. Further it is necessary because of the weakened condition of the muscles which are unable to hold the bones in their proper position that the arch be supported and this object be attained. The supports are properly fitted and should cause no discomfort and relief should be immediate when the foot is held in correct position and the support becomes a permanent effecting a physiological

French Severely Defeat Tribesmen

BEIRUT, Dec. 5.—(United Press)

The French today smashed the last Druse tribal attempt at resistance at Hasbeya and captured the town. The scattered survivors of the battle, crossed Mount Hermon and re-entered the native villages, where they will remain for the winter.

It is uncertain when Commissioner Henrie de Jovenel will go to Damascus, but it is deemed likely that he will delay for a time awaiting the effect of his offer of independence to Lebanon.

Still Operator Landed in Jail

The three Mc's working in Klamath county out of the governor's office, visited a man who gave his name as W. K. Davidson last night. As a result, Davidson is in jail. The three Mc's—McBride, McMillan, and McCready, are state prohibition men.

Davidson, according to McBride, was in possession of a moonshine still, five gallons of intoxicating liquor, and 100 gallons of mash. The still, officers said, was in his home, and the mash was located in a dug-out nearby.

Just what charges will be lodged against Davidson was not known last night. He probably will be arraigned in the justice court here Monday.
