Stanford Captain To Steal Thunder From Red Grange

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 12.—The lure of gold has won to professional ranks another college football star—Ernie Nevers, Stanford's grid captain and star line punner of the Pacific coast.

According to J. S. O'Brien, local promoter, Nevers had agreed to play in a series of professional football games for "more than $50,000."

"The Pacific coast football star will receive more than $50,000 for a series of from eight to ten games played from Jacksonville to the west coast," the promoter told the United Press tonight.

O'Brien read a telegram from his agent in San Francisco, sent last night, which read:

"Nevers ready to sign. Contract being drafted."

"By this time," O'Brien said, "the contract probably is in the mails."

Nevers will lead a team of "all-American" calibre and his first appearance will be here on January 2, against "Red" Grange's eleven. O'Brien stated the contract calls for the star's services up to March 15.

Foot Health Talks: What Are Bunions?

Here is another of the popular foot health talks given by Dr. William M. Scholl, M. D., author of "Bunions: How to Cure Them" and "The Foot Book."

By WILLIAM M. SCHOLL, M. D.

The general impression seems to be that a bunion is a growth like a corn. This is a serious mistake for a bunion has no relation to a corn.

A bunion is caused, in the first place, by the crowding of the big toe to the outside of the foot, forcing it either to underlap or overlap the second toe. The result is to force the joint of the toe outward, or away from the central line of the foot. Since pointed toes and narrow restricted shapes in shoes are among principal causes, for when pressure is brought to bear on the foot its full expansion is not permitted and the great toe is forced outward and backward. Weak arch and flat foot condition can be traced in a great number of cases as being the direct cause.

A bunion consists of an inflammation of the soft tissues over the great toe joint. It may even involve the joint itself, in which case the twisting of the big toe may cause the joint to separate and force the cartilage out. The cartilage is a white tissue which binds the joints together. It is kept in supple condition by a lubricating secretion which is contained in the bursa, a little sac which supplies the joint with the secretion. When the joint is opened and the cartilage forced out the bursa becomes irritated and inflamed.

Of course, the forcing of the joint out of position makes it rub against the shoe and produces irritation of the skin. Nature, in protecting the skin throws a callous over the whole thing and you have a full grown bunion with all its agonizing pain and discomfort.

It is easy to understand why plaster, medicinal preparations, acids and other such treatments cannot bring correction. At most these can reduce the swelling a little, and perhaps remove the callous growth, but the bunion condition remains and will probably "come" to lower as the big toe continues in its distorted position.

X-ray showing distortion of great toe joint in hallux valgus, accompanied by bunions.

Correction can be secured only by straightening the big toe, reducing the swelling, shielding the tender joint from hurt of pressure and giving nature a chance to correct the harm. In considering foot troubles it is necessary to realize that after all it is nature that does the correcting; we can help nature by doing our best to restore natural conditions.

In correcting bunion troubles the aim should be to support the arch to prevent spreading of the foot, straighten the big toe to remove the cause of the trouble and protect it from hurt while the healing process is being effected by nature.

It is absolutely necessary to support the arch by its proper position to obtain rest and build up the foot strength. This is the first step in correcting bunions, as it is in correcting almost every other foot ailment, because it is weakness of the arch that causes the trouble and only a properly fitted arch support will correct this weakness.

"HOBO COLLEGE" RULES POOR KID HAS BEST SHOW

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—(United News)—If you want your boy to be a bandit you are advised by the Juvenile research department of the Chicago hobo college to dress him in velvets and curls.

Make him up like a "Lord Fauntleroy" when he's little and the chances are ten to one that he'll grow up to be a bustling Gerald Chapman or Al Jennings. By the time he is ten years old he will have been in so many fist fights with (launting and scornful playmates that his whole outlook on life will be one of combative revenge. As soon as he is old enough to tote a weapon he'll begin saying it with guns.

The easy-going ease-free philosophers of the hobo college who have long since given up the fight for riches for the call of the road, are devoting the autumn and early winter semester to a study of the social sciences.

As crime seems to be the most engaging subject in Chicago this winter the "hobs" organized a department of juvenile research to find out what makes gunmen.

The answer contained in the report of a special committee is that the stuff gunmen are made of includes long curls, "sissy" clothes and doting mothers.

Has Better Chance
"We have found," says the report, "that the tough kid isn't nearly so apt to get out of tune with society when he grows up as the boy who is made 'queer' by dressing him up too much.

get him into so many fights that his view of life is twisted, they will at least give him an inferiority or superiority complex and one thing is just as bad as another.

"The only way he can get what he wants is with a gun, so he buys one and becomes a gunman.

"Remember the puny little shavers that used to come to school every day all dressed up in frills? Sometimes they weren't much bigger than a minute, but they were so harassed by the other fellows that going to school for them was just one fist fight after another. They are the ones that are responsible for Chicago's crime wave now."

The hobo college is a resort for middle western tramps who make Chicago their winter headquarters. It is managed by Dr. Ben Reitman on funds furnished by James Eads How, the millionaire hobo of St. Louis.

This winter the college is going in for the social sciences. "We don't worry about the body," says Dr. Reitman. "We work with the mind and the soul. The boys get their bodies taken care of in the streets."
