Shortfielder "Robbie's Prize"

Brooklyn was the lucky one of the eight Big Time clubs that sought the services of "Chuck" Corgan, voted by western league managers as the best shortstop in the circuit. The consideration was "over $10,000 cash." He's a turnover batter at an average of .308 for 126 games.

YOUNG BOB GETS ONE SENATE HONOR

The messengers, however, have made it plain that there are few, if any, senators, who aren't "nice," and that makes the work pleasant, says Miss Virginia Voeckner, who acted as spokesman for the young women.

PLOTTERS HELD

BERLIN, Dec. 17.—Two Germans have been arrested charged with plotting to assassinate Foreign Minister Stresemann.

The prisoners named Kaltdorff and Lorenz, belonged to the fascist and nationalist parties respectively. An intercepted letter revealed the plot and the plans for escape by motor car.

FOX CAUGHT IN ICE

FARMINGTON, Conn., Dec. 17.—A large, red fox, who chose a rather damp spot for a nap on the estate of Winchell Smith, the playwright, awoke a prisoner, his tail frozen in the ice formed by the increasing cold weather. An employe shot and killed the struggling animal.

OFFERS DENIAL

Trial Started Against Mining Stock Salesmen

PORTLAND, Dec. 17.—Trial of A. J. Barrett and Margaret Covert, indicted by the grand jury on the charge of unlawfully offering corporate securities for sale, was started today before Circuit Judge Biggs, who is occupying the courtroom of Circuit Judge Walter H. Evans. Deputy District Attorney Jay Stockman stated the two defendants had sold stock in the Sky-line mine, a Southern Oregon Mining company, in violation of the "blue sky" law. They are charged with having sold two shares of capital stock in the company to Grant E. Barrett.

Sports Done Brown

By NORMAN E. BROWN This is open season for ideas. Of course most of them are along Christmas gift lines. But there are others.

Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburg Pirates, the greatest bunch of mudders baseball has ever known, has an idea for correcting the "called game" evil.

Dreyfuss points out that whenever it becomes apparent that a ball game may be called on account of rain, darkness or the umpire's failing eyesight (remember Hildebrand?) the winning team starts to stall (providing the game has gone four and a half or five innings) or the losing team starts to play for time, hoping that the game never will reach the full game stage.

He believes this situation would be remedied if the players realized that the game, if not finished that day, would have to be completed the next.

He therefore suggests that all such called games be continued on the next playing date, the teams re-joining the battle as they stood, man for man, and score for score, on the preceding day.

Barney doesn't state exactly how far he would go in demanding the game be resumed at its original status.

Had the last game of the world's series been called under Barney's plan would he have demanded the same amount of mud in the pitcher's box the following day?

And eastern football followers have an idea. Yale alumni are sponsoring a movement to make Princeton a participant in the closing game of the Big Three grid tussles every third year.

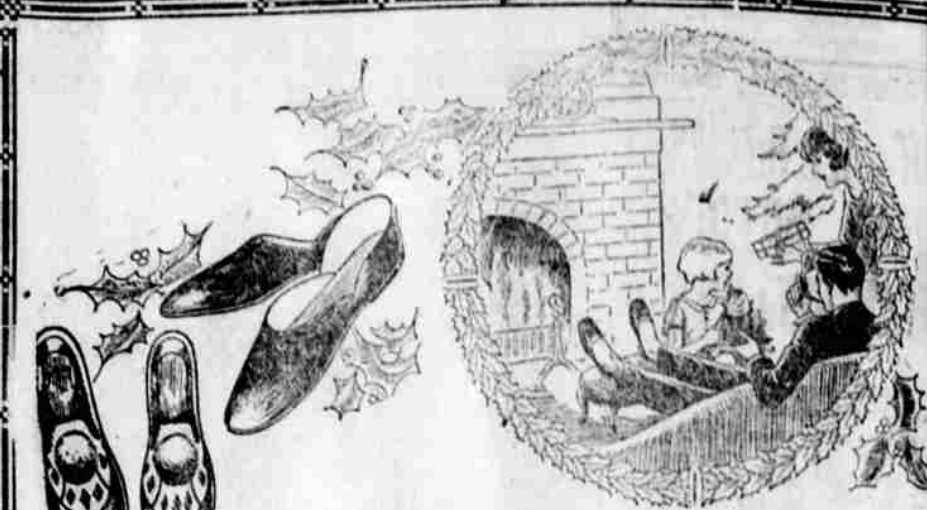

As it is now the Princeton eleven plays both Yale and Harvard in what might be called preliminary games to the Yale-Harvard contest—the climax of the season.

It is suggested that Princeton and

Yale meet in the final game one year, Princeton and Harvard the following and then Yale and Harvard, the games rotating on a three year basis. Princeton may object to that, however. The New Jersey school usually has plenty of football material—as Yale and Harvard will testify after the defeats of the past season. This is partly because Princeton can offer its player short-
