

ANNA

had a most interesting conversation. Joanna's lips quivered, a little grimly. Something of weariness came into her eyes. Fingering there a moment, and then vanished quickly. She took John's hands. She had intended to kiss him, but led him to a couch. Instead, and put him down beside her. "Now tell me," she commanded, "why you have stayed away from me. I have been so happy, expecting you every minute."

"I wanted to, Jo," he said simply, "particularly because it has been hard for me to put off telling you how sorry I am for the things I thought when I heard of the wonderful thing that happened to you. I should have known better, but I just couldn't believe I would have come before tonight but you wouldn't let me, you know, and now, of course, I know why. I thought, when I saw you, and the people around you, that I would just go along. There will be no room for me, any more."

"You're going to scold again," Joanna complained. "Won't you kiss me, first. You haven't kissed me, John, for a long time now, days and days it seems. And I don't want to be scolded tonight."

Perhaps he would have resisted her, if he could. But there would be few indeed who could have withstood the appeal of her, almost a child in her plaintive plea to be humored and fondled. John gathered her to him and held her. Her hands pressed against his breast—her old trick which sometimes had been a pretense.

Suddenly he put her away from him. Even put away the arm she had flung over his shoulder. When she saw how white his face was she understood why he was waiting, why he couldn't, just then, make words.

"Now," she said, softly, "you must tell me why you were going away without even coming up to me."

"Because, Jo," he answered, "you already have gone away from me. I have tried to see it differently, but that's the way it is. When I came here tonight, I thought we would have our hours together—I didn't know it was to be an affair, like this! And that you had planned for me to find you in the very midst of the sort of thing you like—that fits you so well."

Joanna settled back, patiently and quietly. The deep brown settled in her eyes.

day present. Different, you see, from yours."

She looked at him from widened eyes. She wondered at her own calm. She was not hurt as she had been that night at Mrs. Adams' when John repudiated her. He was not doing that sort of thing again. Now he was quietly, stubbornly taking himself out of her life, or rather thrusting her out of his.

A wild impulse to run up stairs, wrap herself in a cloak and run out into the street with him, thrilled her for a moment and then lapsed into the deadly calm that puzzled her.

"But John," she said, "I love you. I have always loved you. Why must you make such a fuss about the money? It won't change me, not so much as it has changed you?" He interrupted her.

"That's just it! It won't change you. It has only brought you out of yourself, and revealed you. This sort of thing won't get you any place, in the end. It is not the background for a girl, no matter how good she is—and I believe, Jo, as I always have, that you're good. You will stay good just as long as you can. I shall always want you, but I can't have you. Can I?"

His last words were a pleading for his justification. It would have been better, perhaps, if he had not spoken them. They reminded Joanna that he was one who would not, could not, understand her, or one like her. Still she wasn't hurt. She suffered, because her heart was turning over. She longed for him, wanted to yield to him as he would have had her yield to his fears for her and to his ideas that she should be some other kind of girl, but she realized that it would all be useless. She would never be content with all enchantments taken out of the world that had suddenly become so lavish to her.

"Then you won't be coming back, you won't accept things as they are and come back to me?" she asked.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL PROPERTY

WHEREAS, heretofore, on January 18, 1926, the Common Council did regularly pass, and thereafter, on January 25, 1926, the Mayor approved, Ordinance No. 732, entitled:

AN ORDINANCE AUTHORIZING AND DIRECTING THE MAYOR OF KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON, TO SELL THE REAL PROPERTY HEREINAFTER PARTICULARLY DESCRIBED, SAME BEING THE PROPERTY HERETOFORE KNOWN AS RIVERSIDE PARK, AT PUBLIC AUCTION, TO THE HIGHEST AND BEST AND MOST RESPONSIBLE BIDDER FOR CASH AND DECLARING AN EMERGENCY.

And in and by the said ordinance the Mayor and Police Judge were authorized and directed to sell the said parcels of real property to the highest, best and most responsible bidder, in cash in United States gold coin, and thereafter, should sale be made, to make, execute and deliver unto the purchaser or purchasers at said sale the good and sufficient deed of this City conveying such property to said purchaser or purchasers, and the Common Council in and by said ordinance determined that the said park was no longer useful or needed for park purposes but that the same should be sold.

THEREFORE, by virtue of the said ordinance, and the directions and authority therein contained,

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the City of Klamath Falls, Oregon, will, on Monday, the 15th day of March, 1926, at the office of the Police Judge, in the City Hall at Klamath Falls, Klamath County, Oregon, at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, sell, at public auction, to the highest, best and most responsible bidder, in cash in United States gold coin, and pursuant to the Charter of the City of Klamath Falls and the laws applicable thereto, the following described tracts or parcels of land:
