Don't Compare Behind Plate But Batting Makes 'Em Rival

Benny Bengough, who held down catching burden of New York Yankees last fall when Steve O'Neill and Willie Schang gave out, seemed to have the regular catching job cinched for this year until Huggins bought Pat Collins from St. Paul. Bengough still has it cinched as far as catching is concerned. Collins can't hold a candle to him behind the plate. BUT COLLINS CAN HIT. And unless Benny can raise his batting average above .275 he may be second string catcher again. Photos from the Yankee training camp.
