

VOLCANIC LAVA FLOW SUBSIDING

Fear Still Felt That Flow May Start on Hilo Side of Maunaloa Crater

HILO, April 20.—(United News)—A new glow has appeared at the summit of Maunaloa, on the Hilo side, and it was believed here Tuesday that lava may pour from the crater in this direction.

Other streams from the great volcano are reported dormant.

Cooling breezes from the sea have parted the cloud bank that has hung over the Kona district and the great lava streams from Maunaloa have been revealed in all their grandeur.

Explosions within the streams themselves sent jets of fire a hundred feet into the air, lighting the dark, hot gulches of the mountain as if by flashlight.

Aviators have been able to obtain photographs and close-up views for the scientists, who judge that the activity at the summit has ceased for the time. When the clouds parted the aviators found a huge new fissure in the rift near the summit. This was bubbling with occasional growling surges of lava.

The flow toward Kona has cooled and unless augmented by new outbursts is not likely to do heavy damage. The third great stream as the Kau flow, is still active at the source, but cooling at the wedge-shaped front practically has stopped its movement.

Coincident with the slowing up at the top smoke has begun seeping into Kilauea, indicating to the residents that the "lake of fire" soon will be filled with fire and that other eruptions will cease. Dr. Thomas Jaggar, volcanologist who has watched Maunaloa for years, refused Tuesday to predict what is going to happen.

The Red Cross here is raising funds with which to assist Hawaiians made destitute by the destruction of the village of Hoopuloa, buried Sunday under a flood of lava from Maunaloa.

FLYERS IN DANGER

CALCUTTA, April 21.—(United News)—The Spanish aviators Lorica and Gallarza, flying from Madrid to Manila, left Calcutta for Rangoon at 7:45 this morning.

The weather was bad. Instead of following the curving coastline of the bay of Bengal in their flight to Rangoon, the aviators took a cross bay route, which although shorter is very dangerous. Many other aviators who have attempted the flight across this route have met disaster.

Some small business was reported in the territory from Walla Walla to Yakima at prices ranging from 28c to 29c pound, the lower figures for heavy stuff.

DEBT OF ITALY STARTS BATTLE

Enemies in Senate Send the Measure Back to Committee—for Delay

WASHINGTON, April 20.—(United News)—Opponents of the Italian debt settlement will attempt to send it back to committee when the pact comes up for a final vote in the senate Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, hoping to kill it by delay.

Senator Smoot, Utah republican, who is in charge of the bill for settlement, as a member of the debt funding committee, predicted Tuesday that this effort would fail and that the pact would be ratified by a safe majority.

No motion for re-commitment has been offered but is expected to be presented when the time for a vote is reached.

Senator Harrison, Mississippi democrat, declared there has been an investigation of the possible influence that J. P. Morgan and company may be exerting efforts to have the two billion debt settlement ratified.

"It is unreasonable that we should settle the Italian debt on the basis of 27 cents on the dollar and make the other nations pay 80 and 82 cents on the dollar merely to aid Morgan to reap a seven per cent profit on his transaction," he said.

Texas Hit by a Terrific Storm

DALLAS, Texas, April 20.—(United News)—Sweeping over a wide section of western and southwestern Texas Tuesday a violent wind and rain storm destroyed property, caused the deaths of two children and one man, injured others and washed out many miles of railroad tracks which tied up trains and caused the wreck of one.

Twenty miles of the Texas and Pacific tracks near Monahan are flooded and washouts held up the crack Sunshine Pacific, carrying Jack Dempsey, and his party from El Paso to Fort Worth. The tracks were reported repaired late Tuesday.

LINDSAY FEARS A CONTROVERSY

In Burbank Eulogy Sought To Defend Right of Any Man's Belief

DENVER, April 20.—(United News)—In the eulogy which Judge Ben Lindsay delivered at the grave of his friend, Luther Burbank, he sought to defend the right of any man to believe as he chose.

Asserting that he was not trying to express his own religious views, the Denver jurist Monday night gave out a statement in answer to thousands of inquiries that have been made to him since his remarks at the grave of the famous scientist.

Judge Lindsay, however, declined to say whether his views concurred with those of the naturalist.

"Some day I propose to make my views known, but I don't propose now to bring down upon my head the storm which Burbank brought upon himself from the lips of those who deny anyone else the right to hold views different from their own."

In his speech at the grave, Judge Lindsay said:

"What you have done here and what you were here is your only sure and certain immortality."

CELEBRATES TOO SOON.

BELVIDERE, Ill., April 20.—(United News)—After celebrating his victory by buying large quantities of cigars for the voters, Walter Van Epps learned that election officials had found a bunch of ballots that had not been counted. They gave a majority for sheriff to Van Epps' opponent.

Bayonets Guard Vote at Herrin

HERRIN, Ill., April 20.—(United News)—The flash of bayonets and the ominous rattle of rifles kept peace while Herrin elected aldermen Tuesday. The balloting was tight and voters did not linger about the polls. National guards were stationed in every precinct admonishing the citizens to "move along."

Danger from strife was said to be much greater than in the elections a week ago which resulted in rioting and six murders, but when the polls closed not even a fist fight had been reported.

Ku Klux Klan and anti-klan forces were about equally divided in the election and the guardsmen sent here a week ago remained on duty to prevent a renewal of the old feud.

CATS RESPONSIBLE

FOLKESTONE, Eng., April 20.—(United News)—A large moving van, carrying a load of furniture, two men and two black cats became unmanageable at a dangerous curve, near here, jumped the road, turned a complete somersault and landed right side up in a field 20 feet below. Neither men, cats, furniture or van was hurt.

GARDEN TOOLS TEND TO MAKE WORK SIMPLER

another improvement. Narrow-bladed and angular trowels for handling small plants in transplanting are a convenience that everybody needs.

Edging tools as well as machines are needed in the well-kept garden where there are grass paths. Little one-wheeled lawn mowers to clip the "whiskers at the edge of grass-bordered beds make lawn mowing a much easier task and sharp grass shears that will really cut are another useful addition to the garden outfit.

Wheel hoes have become so well recognized as necessities for even the smallest garden that almost everyone has one. New attachments make the work of skimming the weeds from the garden almost a pleasure. The tendency in garden tools is toward durability and permanency. It is a good time to look over the catalogue or the displays in the seed stores while there is still time, and lay in an adequate supply of handy tools. It is a good plan to buy in pairs, so if one is lost there will be another handy while the last one is being recovered. Trowels always prove elusive. Lay in a supply of strong stakes if you can collect them. They are always needed.

Smiles as He Goes With 339 Others to Devil's Island

World's attention again is centered on Devil's Island, French penal colony where medieval methods of punishment survive, as another shipload of convicts slowly makes its way from France to the island. Aboard the ship are 340 men doomed to the "dry guillotine," the unfortunate name for the hell-hole, where they are subject to tortures of equatorial heat and the worst of tropical insects as well as the extreme cruelty of keepers. One of them (arrow) can be seen smiling as he goes aboard the ship shown above.
