

Snappy Folder
Now Broadcast

Showing literary ability on the part of the writer and attractively setting forth facts of one of the recent sub-divisions near Klamath Falls, the folder gotten out by the Allan McComb advertising agency for Walton, Wright and company, realtors, is winning attention. Ten thousand copies, printed by the W. O. Smith print shop are being sent all over the country. Following is part of the statement on the folder, printed in orange and black on cream paper:

"Served by one main line interstate railroad and with one other existing rail line and two proposed lines converging in its boundaries, Klamath Falls is the hub in this 'empire awakening.'"

"Klamath Falls' phenomenal awakening and growth challenges comparison. Its score of saw mills, employing many hundreds of men, are increasing and constantly expanding; its half dozen huge box factories, running one, two or three shifts to supply the California fruit box demand, bring into Klamath each year upwards of $12,000,000 to be distributed in pay rolls and general prosperity; farming pursuits are especially remunerative, since the immense irrigation systems eliminate the risk of crop failure."

"Especially of interest to home-seekers are the thriving churches of practically every denomination, and the comprehensive school system, in which Klamath Falls takes pardonable pride. A large new public school building, adding to the six already in use, was dedicated in March, 1926."

"Klamath Falls is fast adding new and diversified industries which stabilize and even up the payroll, and absorb the slight seasonal slackening of the lumber industry. The tremendous increase in population assures profitable openings for businesses and professions for a long time to come. Because 'Klamath Falls' is on the lips of thousands, does not imply that this is a second 'Florida.' For in Klamath, real industrial opportunity awaits, not founded on speculative and real estate inflations."

"Ideally located, with respect to access by train or auto, seven minutes' ride from the industrial or business districts; gentle slope, offering unsurpassed view and adequate drainage; completely served by irrigation; soil is undeniably the best mellow, sandy-loam to be found in the county; located near the principal automobile artery, The Dalles-California highway, which is rapidly becoming a closely built-up residence and industrial section."

Homedale was opened in January by the Walton Wright company.

Nation Watches Experiment in California of New Method to Enforce

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22.—(United Press)—Northern California today became the nation's testing ground in a new plan for tightening prohibition enforcement.

Under authorization from President Coolidge, Colonel Ned Green, federal prohibition administrator for northern California and Nevada, drafted the first rough outline of a plan for the enlargement of his enforcement squad by addition of "dollar a year" agents.

Rest Follows
Adoption of the plan by the rest of the country depends upon its success in this district.

The authorization signed today by President Coolidge called for inauguration of the plan throughout the country. Protests from various senators was followed by announcement by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews that the plan would first receive a trial in northern California. Realizing that the purpose of the plan would be defeated by the protests it might incur, Colonel Green made cautious advancement in his plan of procedure.

Dollar-a-Year
"I will appoint the special agents slowly, and only in localities where the district attorneys or sheriffs have specifically asked for them," he declared. "I will appoint them principally from the ranks of deputy sheriffs. I expect to have no difficulty," he said, "in enlisting their services."

The auxiliary force of "dollar-a-year" agents in this district will number between 30 and 40 when appointments have been completed, Colonel Green said.

Northern California was selected for the trial due to the fact that the plan was first suggested by Colonel Green.

For Klamath County

Constant Work Necessary for Whole Community

Klamath Falls and Klamath County are not isolated entities, any more than the individuals that make up their population. Just as it is necessary for individuals to make known their wants to each other in order to have them satisfied, so it is necessary for Klamath Falls and Klamath county to make known to the state, the Pacific coast, and the whole country what it has to sell and what it wants.

Klamath County has timber, lots of it. Klamath County has wonderful farm lands awaiting settlement. Klamath County has scenery of more than unusual character. Klamath County is undergoing a remarkable development and offers great opportunities to the newcomer who possesses constructive enterprise. Klamath County has needs, too, of capital, industries, public buildings, governmental aid of various kinds, as well as settlers. These things are true, but they will not do much good unless they are made known.

To make the voice of the city and county articulate, to make known to the world what we want in exchange, and to better concentrate our own energies, all require organization. Such an organization is the chamber of commerce. The annual report of its president, just made public, is sufficient proof that the local chamber is fulfilling its mission.

Now For Work

Both Winners and Losers Smiling with Election Past

Babies will be given a respite from politicians' kisses, matrons will receive less frequent assurances of their youth and beauty from aspiring candidates courting their favor at the polls, and the voter's hand, weary and limp from the many fervent political hand-clasps of the past few weeks, will be permitted to regain its normal size and appearance. The election is over, and we can all settle down to real business until November approaches.

The new charter was swamped, so it is up to the present city government to carry on. If the spirit of co-operation for the good of the city that has been recently manifested continues, the city can thrive and prosper.

To the successful candidates The News extends congratulations, with sincere hopes that they will continue to live up to the promises made in the primary campaign.

LIVING AND LOVING
FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

Pearls Before Swine

"Quick, sonny! Grab the seat before the lady gets it!" And sonny "grabbed."

Ducking under the elbow of the weary woman turning in gratitude toward prospective temporary relief for aching muscles and ragged nerves, the youngster plumped his eight or nine years of sturdy solidity into the one empty seat in the crowded car. And from this ill-won point of vantage he followed the example of his mother and gazed stolidly ahead, careless of years or sex that should have entitled others to the comfort he neither needed nor deserved.

Like mother, like son! There they sat, side by side, faces impassive save for the faint smirk about their mouths that betrayed their satisfaction in the boy's dexterity and their fellow traveler's discomfort.

Maternal love should be and almost always is the most beautiful thing in the world. But it overshoots its mark when it fosters selfishness, greed, indifference, cruelty; it misuses its power when it encourages the young objects of its devotion to go into training for hogs.

Hog is not a pretty word, but that is exactly what the mother in question was raising her son to be—a "seat hog" with whom we are all familiar and whom we all so heartily detest.

Older grown, that dexterous youth will be the man who in his mad rush for the open door, bows over his less husky fellows; the man who will occupy two seats in the car, one for himself and one for his elbows; the man who will hide behind his newspaper from the lame, the halt and the blind, fearful lest public opinion, expressed in scornful glances, might force him to seat-sacrifice.

Unfortunately there are in our midst certain swine, a strange species of creature who walk up right on two feet and wear the features and the habiliments of man.

And before these swine the city and the town casts its pearls—pearls in the form of public parks, pavilions, piers and beaches.

Go with the crowd any holiday afternoon to any recreation spot and linger there until they leave and then look about you. You'll see the ground literally "papered" with comic sheets and pictorial supplements. Banana peels, orange skins, peanut shucks, egg shells—all the "leftovers" of the picnic (the only legitimate last resting place of which is the garbage pail) strewn the grass and the sands. And you'll find your disposition to linger in the cool of evening vanishing, not alone because so much beauty has become unsightly, but because it has become unsanitary, sometimes unsavory as well.

There are decent people in our land, millions of them, and their pleasure is more than marred, it is actually destroyed, by the gross carelessness of those who are in the majority, the decent people suffer because of the unspeakable selfishness of the inferior few.

Dr. William Hornaday, director of New York city's zoological park, came out the other day and most emphatically denounced the "disorderly human beings" who defile the public parks, and his denunciation was well merited, as any one who had seen the garden on a certain late Sunday afternoon would have agreed.

What shall be done to those offenders who take the merry out of merry-making is up to the courts to decide. Our business is with ourselves. At least we can restrict our own actions when they infringe upon the rights of others; can get straight in our own minds the difference between liberty and license; can refuse to run with the herd of swine.

Dinner Stories

The chairman of the gas company was making a popular address.

"Think of the good the gas company has done," he cried. "If I were permitted a pun, I would say in the words of the immortal poet, 'Honor the light brigade.'"

Voice of a consumer from the audience: "Oh, what a charge they made!"

A young lawyer, pleading his first case, had been retained by a farmer to prosecute a railway company for killing 24 hogs. He wanted to impress the jury with the magnitude of the injury.

"Twenty-four hogs, gentlemen. Twenty-four; twice the number there are in the jury box."

A visitor calling on an Irishman who had the credit of being an ardent partisan at political meetings said, "What's that, Mike, that you have in the glass case?"

"Oh! that's the brick I got agin my head at the last election."

"Oh! and what's that little flower on the top of it for?"

"That's the flower from the grave of the man that threw it."

When the colored couple were being married by the clergyman, and the words, "love, honor and obey" were spoken, the bridegroom interrupted:

"Read that again, suh! Read it once mo', so's de lady kin ketch de full solemnity ob de meanin'.

I've been married befoh."

ARICA, May 21.—(United News)—Registration of voters to participate in the Tacna-Arica plebiscite ordered by President Coolidge as arbitrator, was concluded Friday.

The registration was held despite the official refusal of Peru to take any part in its management or to approve it. It resulted in the following figures, which are now virtually complete:

Total voters 5396; voters in Arica, 3351; voters in Tacna, 2545; voters rejected, 58.

Ten days are now allowed for any appeals against the manner in which the registration was handled. Chilean newspapers in the plebiscitary territory are opposing any settlement except that which carries out the original plan of President Coolidge's award.
