Opponents Invite Income Tax Issue

Opponents of a state income tax are taking a big, broad view of the situation. It is a view that will go a long way toward establishing confidence in Oregon. Instead of obstructing the proposed initiative measures finding a place on the November ballot they are actually urging that assistance be given the so-called Grange bill in securing signatures for the petition in order that a distinct issue may be brought before the people.

The Greater Oregon association comes out flatly against any state income tax. It is an association that frankly publishes the names of its backers. It is an organization devoted to sane and constructive legislation in the interest of Oregon development. It promises a genuine campaign on the subject of education, if its present stand may be taken as any indication, in full confidence that the people of Oregon may see the light.

Financial help is asked for the Grange and Farmers' union which are jointly filing the first income tax bill. Credit is given their bill as being a carefully drawn-up measure, even while the political motives back of the bill are decried. It is emphatically stated that the politicians that are deluding the farmers have little conception of the fiscal requirements of the state.

There is another organization known as the Public Service league. This group is not fully identified. It has the so-called offset bill in hand by which property taxpayers may present tax receipts in lieu of the payment of income tax.

Short shrift is given the offset bill by the Greater Oregon association. "They believe that if we are going to have an income tax we ought to have one that is harmless," says the association. It continues: "That is a mistake in policy. What Oregon must do, and do speedily, is to settle the income tax issue."

This plan of approaching the entire consideration in placing it before the people is fair to the last degree. The issue will be placed before the people in an intelligent manner. Oregon has had many vexing tax problems. Politicians have not failed to take advantage of the situation. It is time the people were thoroughly informed as to the real lack of merit behind the tax situation as it now stands, so created as it is by the politicians.

The Greater Oregon association is to be congratulated on the scope of its plan for carrying out the campaign. When those who oppose your pet measure help to assist you in getting it on the ballot confidence is awakened at the very beginning.

The Pied Piper of June

LIVING and LOVING

Refreshment

"Your letter of the 10th instant received."

Limping the typewriter keys clicked off the stereotyped phrase, with a sharp "tek" affixed the period and came to a short and sudden stop.

"Whew! What a day!"

The Capable Typist wiped a heated brow and gazed at the dingy, brick walls of the factory across the way.

"Slave! Slave! From morn till night, and for what? Raises in this office are as scarce as June in December! I have been here two years now and in the old pay envelope not an added penny! Could manage to struggle along, though, at the same so-much-per—for I suppose times are hard—if only I didn't have to rush so to get 'caught up.' Ugh! Makes me sick just to think of all I must do before I leave for home!"

The Capable Typist groaned and glanced at the pile of letters in the wire basket.

"Don't know what is the matter with me, but I simply can't 'pep up' like I used to. This is the third day I've gone without a bite of lunch, yet, so far as getting ahead with the work is concerned, I am like a squirrel in a cage, going round and round and not getting anywhere at all."

"In the spring a young maid's fancy turns to—"

"—Vacation, a comfy hammock, a pair of white shoes, a new hat with red cherries on it, nothing to do, and most of all, something to eat!" finished she sharply. Then in spite of herself she smiled. The eyes twinkling down at her were so friendly.

"Rather thought it wasn't love that held your thoughts!" laughed the Young Assistant. "I—perhaps I was mistaken—I thought I heard you grumbling."

"You weren't. You did," admitted the Capable Typist, less crossly. "I'm tired and I have a headache and I am melting and I am the last person in the world to choose as a merry little companion this afternoon."

"I get you," chuckled the Young Assistant. "And I pass by—on my own business bent. But you have my sympathy. I felt just as you do only an hour ago."

"Three men's work for a one man job," thought I. And in no time at all I growled myself into the mad-enough-to-chew-nails state of mind, so fatal on a warm day. But ten-penny nails being out of reach, I decided to put my molars to work on something more satisfying. A palatable luncheon, a shave and I am feeling fit again! Wonderful what a seance with a barber will do for one!"

The Young Assistant passed on. The Capable Typist reached for her handbag and surreptitiously studied herself in its diminutive mirror.

Complexion sallow! Skin rough! Wrinkles marring the smoothness of the forehead! An unsightly blackhead! Shadows beneath the eyes. "Tresses strongly and sheen-lose!"

"Not a pretty picture," sighed the Capable Typist. "Work! I have made of it a fetish and it has made of me a frump!"

"Wonderful what a seance with the barber will do for one!"

The Young Assistant's words flashed through her mind. "Sauce for the gander, is sauce for the goose!"

The Capable Typist powdered her nose, plumed on her hat and departed.

The scene shifts. From office to the beauty parlor.

A room spotlessly white, refreshingly cool. And in a reclining chair the capable typist.

Looks soft and shining from a recent shampoo!

From hot and cold applications complexion emerging cleansed and rosy.

Headache vanishing under restful ministrations!
Spirits rising by the minute urged upward by the comfortable assurance of being well groomed.
The seance with the hair-dresser and the massage at an end—
Back to the office again!
The Capable Typist attacks and vanquishes the contents of the wire basket!
A word to the wise: "Time off" for refreshment for body as well as for mind is time, not lost, but won!

Dinner Stories

The guests at the boarding table were discussing diets.

"I lived on eggs and milk for two months," remarked one lady, "and I actually gained ten pounds."

"And I," said a gentleman, lived for more than a year on nothing but milk, and gained in weight every day."

"Mercy!" came the chorus. "How did you manage to do it?"

The gentleman smiled. "I can not say that I remember," he replied, "but I presume my method was similar to that of other babies."

The sweet young thing entered the public library and inquired whether "The Red Boat" was in. "We've no book of that name," she was told.

"Oh, I'm sorry," said the girl. "I made a mistake. I mean 'The Scarlet Launch'."

After a search the library assistant reported that no such book was in the library.

"But I'm sure you must have it," insisted the girl. Suddenly she opened her handbag and produced a slip of paper. She blushed.

"I beg your pardon," she said. "It's 'The Ruby Yacht,' by a man named Omar, that I want."

"Well, look here, my man," the old gentleman said, "what would you say if I offered you work?"

"Bless yer life, sir," came the reply. "I wouldn't mind it a bit. I can take a joke same as most people!"

EUCCHARISTS MAKE CHICAGO CAPITAL OF CATHOLICISM

CHICAGO, June 4.—Through five days of religious pageantry such as has never before been seen in America, the International Eucharistic congress will make of Chicago a capital of Catholicism second only to Rome.

Pilgrims from the ends of the earth are already arriving, although the congress itself does not convene until June 29. Catholics of the city are preparing to open their homes to provide hospitality for such of the 750,000 Eucharistic congress visitors who cannot be accommodated in the hotels.

On the lake front, at the south end of Grant park, the great stadium, now known as Soldiers' field, is being put in shape for use by the congress. Out at Mundelein, a community within an hour's ride of Chicago, a town has virtually been made to order for the purposes and needs of the congress. The municipal pier, another of Chicago's greatest civic achievements, is also being prepared for use by the pilgrims.

The congress will not be a "congress" in the modern, accepted sense of the word. There will be neither discussions, debates nor conferences. Rather will the five days be given over to ritualistic observances and outward manifestations of the Catholic faith in the actual presence of Jesus Christ in the world today.

Cardinal Mundelein, Chicago's own archbishop who was elevated to the eminence of the wearers of the red hat, is busy with the many details which must be his as official host to the congress. The legate, Cardinal Bonzano of Rome, is now on his way, bearing the blessing of his holiness, Pius XI. Lay officials, with exacting and important functions to perform, have dropped all other considerations in preparation for the congress.
