

City Parks

The Consideration Is Not Real Estate

There is a discussion arising over park sites, now that the park board is in funds. It can only be hoped that the discussion will be kept within bounds of reason.

The uppermost thought should be that there are a lot of people who have no real estate to sell, and that all they want is a place for an outing. The mothers and children who could be enjoying the grass and cool shade these sizzling days, and the youngsters who can swim, are not interested in any consideration of real estate values, let offers come from the Klamath Development company or the Moores, or anyone else.

What the people want is parks, and the discussion must not be prolonged interminably.

Without a doubt the consideration of the park board will be for the greatest interests of the entire community. There are men on the park board whose motives should not be questioned. But it is the bickering that may arise which will be deprecated.

Another thought that should be borne in mind. The city council has under consideration the granting of a bus line franchise. There are a lot of people for whom parks will be built who have not automobiles. The council must, in granting its bus line franchise, see to it that transportation is provided to the parks.

Heat the Scapegoat

Blame It For Everything

When it is hot everything is blamed on the heat. "Crazy with the heat" is an old slang phrase which has no more pat application than that by which it is attached to those who make excessive heat responsible for everything from the loss of ball games to the birth of triplets.

One cannot doubt that there are numerous cases of heat prostration, and that some of them result fatally, but in many of the deaths credited to heat the excess of temperature is responsible only in an indirect way. Bather seeks the cooling river and is drowned—heat. Someone goes to sleep in a hammock which breaks and the sleeper is perhaps fatally injured—heat. Another suffers from an attack of acute indigestion possibly due to eating food that should not be eaten in hot weather—heat again.

Heat brings an abundance of discomforts, and it is wise to take precautions to prevent serious results following in its trail, but there is no use becoming alarmed because the temperature hovers around 90 for a week or so. It exceeds that for long periods in the tropics, and yet people continue to exist there.

Observe customs of living that all know are suited to hot weather. Somebody has said that heat is a state of mind, and it is likely that much of the discomfort is more imaginary than real.

You don't really need a great vocabulary, anyway, unless a tire blows when your jack is at home.

LIVING and LOVING

We See By The Papers--

"Turn to the press—its teeming sheets survey,
Big with the wonders of each passing day;
Births, deaths and weddings, forgeries, fires, wrecks,
Harrangues and ballstones, brawls and broken necks!"

Somewhere we ran across the above jingle and we are reminded of it every time we scan the daily paper, our favorite paper though it be, and a fairly conservative one at that.

Columns of catastrophe; corners in crime. Here and there and again a clear account of some event, a straight statement of fact, a statistical record—these calm and dispassionate, amid so much excitement, to give written proof that the world has not yet gone mad.

And who are the characters in the dramas of the hour?

The shades of our ancestors, could they repeat Rip Van Winkle's feat and return to be questioned, would likely and without hesitation declare:

"Men, of course, and by very virtue of their nature."

But the shades, poor benighted things, would be jolly well mistaken!

1925 heroes divide the headline honors with heroines. Desperate Desmonds are indeed all but outwitted in both crime and numbers by Daring Desdemonas.

If you doubt it mark this evidence:

This on the debit side of the feminine account book. And all these tales of feminine effort and achievement, good, bad and indifferent, on the first two pages of one day's paper.

Whoever would have thought it! Certainly not stern great grandfather, who so ardently advocated home as woman's sphere. Nor little great grandmother, who agreed with him.

This new freedom! What does it really mean? For how much profit and how much loss must it make accounting to womanhood?

We hazard no opinion, make no prophecy. Only of one thing are we very sure.

Woman, headliner in the news, tells the world the truth custom had no long forced her to conceal—that she is not in the class with children and idiots, as the good old constitution had it, nor of a species so strangely apart and ethereal as to be placed upon a pedestal and worshipped. Very human, of the earth earthy, she is ruled by ambitions, cursed by greed, immortalized by love, imbued with worthy and unlovely passions; is, in fact, very like unto and no better or no worse than her brother.

Dinner Stories

An Irish farmer, waking up in the night, saw an apparition at the foot of the bed. He reached out for a gun and perforated the ghost with a bullet. In the morning he discovered that he had made a target of his own shirt.

"What did you do then?" inquired the friend to whom he told the story.

"I knelt down and thanked God that I hadn't been inside it," said the farmer piously.

On his tour of the district, a school inspector came before a class of girls. He wrote upon the blackboard, "LXXXX." Then, peering over the rims of his spectacles at a good looking girl in the first row, he said:

"I'd like you to tell me what that means."

"Love and kisses," the girl replied.

It was a dark night and after the breakdown the motorist emerged from beneath the car, struggling for breath. His helpful friend, holding an oil can, beamed on him.

"I've just given the cylinder a thorough oiling, Tom."

"Cylinder!" howled the motorist. "That wasn't the cylinder; it was my ear!"

Some tourists at an hotel in a small Italian town were looking through the menu when a polite waiter came to their assistance.

"The ham is not, and the chicken never was," he explained, "so will you have your eggs tight or loose?"
