"TO A POET A THOUSAND YEARS HENCE"

I who am dead a thousand years,
And wrote this sweet archaic song,
Send you my words for messengers
The way I shall not pass along.

I care not if you bridge the seas,
Or ride secure the cruel sky,
Or build consummate palaces
Of metal or of masonry.

But you have wine and music still,
And statues and a bright-eyed love,
And foolish thoughts of good and
ill,
And prayers to them that sit above.

How shall we conquer? Like a wind
That falls at eve our fancies blow,
And old Mœnides the blind
Said it three thousand years ago.

O friend, unseen, unborn, unknown,
Student of our sweet English
tongue,
Read out my words at night, alone:
I was a poet, I was young.

Since I can never see your face,
And never shake you by the hand,
I send my soul through time and space
To greet you You will understand.

"Miss Radiana Pazmor has been singing different solo parts in our Spring Music festival this year (1925), and I like to recommend her for her artistry, her beautiful voice, and her marvellous musicianship. She combines all these qualities with a charming, ever-willing personality. My best wishes for her future career are following her."

Egbert Swenson, of the San Francisco Bulletin, September 17, 1924, says: "It was a genuine pleasure to sit through the recital last night of Radiana Pazmor, young San Francisco mezzo-contralto, just returned from four years in Europe. The concert was a uniformly brilliant effort. Miss Pazmor's performance never wavered from a high artistic standard. Her reading of the songs was distinguished by most satisfying intelligence. There was beautiful coloring of tones to fit dramatic requirement. There was the cleanest enunciation heard in San Francisco in a long time.
