ness to adopt some form of government of their own."

His words were interpreted as meaning that steps to that end would be taken as soon as possible.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident," the document read, and then enumerated the following as being beyond dispute:

"That all men are created free and equal.

"That they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights.

"That among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

It set forth a belief that the governments should "derive their just powers from the consent of the governed."

And it charged that "the history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations." It asserted that the British government does not derive its power from the consent of the governed as far as America is concerned.

There follows a long list of charges against the British government and the proclamation concludes:

Appeal to Highest Judge

"We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America in general congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare that these united colonies are, and of right ought to be FREE and INDEPENDENT STATES; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved."

Congress Comments

Congress met at 9 a. m. and immediately went into a committee of the whole to complete consideration of Jefferson's draft, which had been started July 2. It remained in session several hours as a committee of the whole and then, having reached an agreement, returned to regular session and adopted the draft by acclamation.

Gun Flints Ordered

The secret committee was instructed to order a large supply of flints for muskets now stored in Rhode Island, sent at once to General Washington in New York.

Harry Wisner, an expert on flints, was ordered to go to Orange, N. J., for a sample of the flint there, which is said to be adaptable to musket use.

Jefferson Was Author of Bill

Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin of Philadelphia, and John Adams were named a committee to draw from the three a single resolution and it was taken up by the congress last Tuesday.

Jefferson Had Particular Cause for Gratification Today

Jefferson had particular cause for gratification today because this was also his birthday.

Leaders in congress said tonight the declaration would be published by General Washington in New York Monday or Tuesday.

John Hancock, President of the Congress

John Hancock, president of the congress, said that he would send the proclamation in all directions by the first post. The next post for New York leaves July 6.

COOLIDGE SIGNS BILLS

President Coolidge came up to "the hill" an hour before adjournment and signed about 88 bills and resolutions which were passed in the final session. He chatted with republican and democratic leaders and expressed himself pleased with the record of this congress which transacted more business in seven months than any other congress of recent years in a similar period.

JURY WILL LOOK INTO KIDNAPING

would be entirely voluntary. William Carter, foreman of the jury, which plans to probe the case in its entirety, starting Tuesday, also declared he would not demand that the evangelist appear in person before the inquisitors.

The district attorney indicated he would take the written statement made by Mrs. McPherson in Douglas, Ariz., before the grand jury Tuesday along with other evidence gathered by both Arizona and Los Angeles investigators.

Has Her Testimony

The evangelist's story is contained in full in this transcript and a personal repetition is not deemed necessary.

The customary activity at Angels temple and Bible school was not in evidence throughout today, a marked contrast to the usual busy atmosphere about the tabernacle since Mrs. McPherson's return. Hundreds of curious who made up a steady stream of humanity to file about the temple and adjacent residence of the pastor, were peculiarly absent. The usual Saturday services were suspended.

It was announced at the temple, however, that Mrs. McPherson will preach from her pulpit three times tomorrow at the regular "church day" services. The temple was elaborately decorated. The evangelist was in seclusion throughout the day, preparing her sermons, which, it was reported, would touch in part on the current investigation by federal and Los Angeles county authorities of her kidnaping story.

Say Solution Is Needed

Local authorities declared tonight they believed that a solution of the mysterious case was near. A careful check on Mrs. McPherson's whereabouts, as related by herself and others, from the time of her disappearance until the "return to life" in the Mexican desert, has been made.

The investigation was concentrated on the movements of a mysterious automobile, it was learned, containing a man and two women, which Arizona and Mexican officials declare was seen in Agua Prieta, two hours before the reappearance there of Mrs. McPherson. Details of this angle of the case and other evidence gathered by authorities at Douglas and Agua Prieta, were received here tonight by chief of detectives Herman Cline and Deputy District Attorney Joe Ryan, legal advisor to the local police department.

LAST HOUR WITNESSES FILIBUSTER IN SENATE

in the nineties and both chambers sultry, cordial dispositions of the senators at the outset enabled minor relief bills to be rushed through at the rate of about two a minute; and conference reports were adopted with celerity.

Blaise Starts Fireworks

But the fireworks started when Senator Blaise, democrat, South Carolina, by objection blocked the Neeley resolution, and Senator Cameron, republican, Arizona, became aroused because his Verde irrigation bill was blocked by his colleague, Senator Ashurst, democrat, Arizona. Cameron obtained the floor at 2:30 p. m. and held it, refusing to yield for transaction of any business until adjournment time.

Coolidge Signs Bills

President Coolidge came up to "the hill" an hour before adjournment and signed about 88 bills and resolutions which were passed in the final session. He chatted with republican and democratic leaders and expressed himself pleased with the record of this congress which transacted more business in seven months than any other congress of recent years in a similar period.

The Only Important Action Taken

The only important action taken was adoption in the senate of the King resolution, directing a senatorial investigation of charges of mismanagement of enemy property by the alien property custodian. The committee would ascertain specifically all facts surrounding the sale of patents to the chemical foundation of Delaware and the Bosch Magneto company.
