Will Search For Underground Flow Of Mediterranean

VENICE, July 20.—(United News)—Search for evidence of underground rivers in the Balkans and examination of the entire Mediterranean area where treacherous rocks and whirlools indicate volcanic phenomena, is the plan now being outlined at the international conference for scientific exploration of the Mediterranean.

Five nations—France, Italy, Great Britain, Spain and Eypt—are represented at the conference which is being held here, upon the invitation of the Italian government.

Evidence already existing of volcanic phenomena in the Mediterranean sea and of the possibility that underground rivers in the Balkans may connect the Adriatic sea with the Dardanelles have caused scientists from these five nations to predict important discoveries as the result of their work.

First investigations will be made in the straits of Messina, where dangerous whirpools and rocks have long given evidence of volcanic phenomena, indicating subterranean or submarine rivers.
