

Newspaper Writer For United News Makes Big Scoop

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(United News)—A newspaper man, dripping wet as he waded out of water which had reached up to his armpits, rushed to the telephone at Kingsdown, England, shortly after 9:30 Friday night and sent out the first news to the world the moment after Gertrude Ederle, American swimming star, conquered the English Channel at 9:39.

He was Sydney Williams, staff correspondent in London for the United Press and the United News. Williams, with Minott Saunders, London staff man of the United Press and the United News, had made arrangements which resulted in the United Press and United News being far ahead throughout the world with the biggest American news story of the day.

Newspapers which take the United Press and the United News received the story of Miss Ederle's remarkable achievement by means of a tug fitted with wireless, a motor launch, which raced messages to the shore when the wireless failed, by special correspondents stationed along the English coast, and by staff correspondents at Cape Gris Nez, France, where Miss Ederle made her start.

A big French seagoing tug was chartered in Boulogne, and it was arranged for this vessel, the La Morinie, to follow the swimmer. It was from this boat that Williams waded to shore and flashed the news.

Hopkins Millions Claimed After 48 Years; Will Filed

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—(United News)—The millions left by Mark Hopkins, one of the "big four" railroad builders of the west, are sought by 137 new claimants who would alter sharply accepted recollections of this outstanding figure in early California history.

A faded piece of paper, bearing what was represented as Hopkins' only will, was filed for probate in superior court here today. The yellowed, crinkled document bore the signature "Mark Hopkins" and the writing was the product of a hand which struggled painfully over the spelling even of the simplest words.

Hopkins died in 1878, apparently leaving no will. There was an estate of $20,000,000 distributed to heirs fixed by court rulings. Now P. B. McCandless, a lathing contractor, comes forward with the claim that he is the grandson of Martin Hopkins, named as a brother of the railroad magnate.

McCandless seeks letters of administration in behalf of 137 alleged heirs, most of whom live in North Carolina.

The "will," according to McCandless, was sent to a Mrs. Moore, sweetheart of Hopkins, who kept it secret. It was found in a deserted house only recently, McCandless declared.

Intrepid Dogger Of Steers Wants To Visit Eugene

"Dad" Clarke, erstwhile intrepid dogger of snorting, pawing steers, who recently made his debut in Klamath Falls aboard a rakish equine craft called "Cyclone," wants to be with the boys at Eugene during the Trail to Rail celebration August 19 and 20, in the capacity of entertainer.

"Dad" may be recalled as the veteran cowpuncher who, garbed in sombrero and red shirt, with snowy beard and locks flying in the wind, rides the main thoroughfares of Klamath Falls almost daily. He hails, according to his own statement, from Three Rivers, New Mexico, the domain of longhorns and rattlers, and in spite of the fact that he is 63, will bulldog a steer with the best of them even yet.

"My horse and I can do a number of pretty passable stunts," Dad declares, "and early this summer we put in several weeks in Yellowstone Park entertaining the tourists with cowboy clowning. I'd like to hire out to some local organization to stage a little act in the parade at Eugene with the Klamath delegation."

It was with this in mind that the aged bull-dogger approached J. J. Miller of the Southern Pacific yesterday morning, in hopes that the railway company might consider placing a feature of true western flavor in the pioneer parade.

Mexican Religious Troubles Not Ours States President

PLYMOUTH, Vt., August 6.—(United News)—Religious troubles are purely domestic and the United States, or any other nation, is not justified in interfering, in the opinion of President Coolidge.

He made this view public today through his official spokesman.

Not until American life and property is placed in jeopardy as a result of the strife between Mexican Catholicism and the government will Washington interfere.

Thus far neither the President nor the state department have been advised of any infringement on the rights of Americans.

Only when contraventional treaties exist, President Coolidge believes, should one nation take formal cognizance of the domestic difficulties of another. No such pact has been consummated between the United States and Mexico.

This statement of position, forthcoming from the Coolidge home-stead there, was taken to mean that the appeals of the American Knights
