Mexican Question Will Be Canvassed Over Week-End

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(United News)—Several aspects of Mexican relations and other questions of foreign policy including the difficulties of the Geneva preliminary arms conference and the European hysteria over the debt settlements will be canvassed by President Coolidge, when Secretary Kellogg visits him over the week-end.

Mexican relations are becoming more delicate, not only because of the religious controversy in which President Calles is engaged, but because of the impending return of Ambassador Sheffield, who is leaving Mexico in a somewhat unhappy mood. There are also rumors of revolutionary plotting by agents on the American side of the border.

Secretary of State Kellogg today issued a denial of reports that Sheffield was being withdrawn from Mexico City as a sign of displeasure towards the Mexican government. Sheffield is returning to the United States solely for a vacation and will return to Mexico within 60 days. Insofar as this government's plans are concerned, Kellogg said: "This report probably grew out of the report that Sheffield is dissatisfied with the state of Mexican relations and has been urging a more aggressive policy."

"This situation goes back more than a year. Sheffield, soon after his arrival in Mexico City became engaged in a controversy with the Mexican government and upon his return home for a vacation a year ago he persuaded Secretary of State Kellogg to issue a public warning to Mexico that American recognition would be withdrawn unless the Mexican government fully protected American lives and American rights."

Kellogg declared that Mexico was on trial before the world. This provoked much criticism in Mexico, a considerable portion of which was directed at Sheffield, who was thought there to have inspired Kellogg's attack.

Sheffield made arrangements for his annual vacation in the United States some weeks ago. There would be no surprise here should he resign, but the attitude reflected around the state department is that this government would have no disposition to use such a development as the vehicle of a gesture of rebuke. While the religious crisis continues this government is anxious to indulge in no displays of any kind regarding Mexico, even having gone so far as to stop preparations for lifting the arms embargo, fearing a false construction would be put on such a step.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice left today for California and a swing around the Mexican border. The present crisis in Mexico, together with the renewed activity of anti-Calles agents along the American side of the border is believed to have prompted Hoover's trip. Reports of increasing activity of groups hostile to Calles north of the Rio Grande have been reaching the department, necessitating increased watchfulness of United States officials all along the border. Also there have been some complaints that American border agents have been unnecessarily zealous in their efforts.

Vigorous representations have been made by the state department to the Mexican government in the case of J. H. Grande, Los Angeles business man who was arrested and held incommunicado by the Mexican police. It was reported his arrest was the result of charges involving the sale of nine carloads of bananas.

The anaemic condition of the Geneva arms conference is receiving more attention within the administration that might be supposed from its outward silence.

This question will be discussed between Kellogg and the President over the week-end and the position of the United States may be outlined shortly thereafter. Kellogg will also lay before the President his latest reports on the debt situation, but it is probable that there will be no discussion on this side in the near future unless some unforeseen development abroad should make an utterance desirable.

Duchess to Be Queen Is Edict Of Many Seers

LONDON, Aug. 12.—(United News)—Fortune tellers, working out the horoscope of Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the duke and duchess of York, declare she will be queen of England.

This implies that the prince of Wales wither will not marry, or if he marries, will die childless; and that the duke of York, his brother, will die without having any sons. Now Princess Elizabeth is third in line of succession to the prince and the duke, but either a son or daughter born to Wales or a son born to the duke of York would displace her.

The fortune tellers declare the stars decree that the princess shall have a long life, but that she will be rather delicate and that she will ascend the throne as Queen Elizabeth. Nine will be the guiding figure of her life, they say, as 13 was Woodrow Wilson's.

The duchess of York, her mother, has now recovered completely from the great strain which few knew she endured when she gave birth to the princess. There was at one time great fear that she would never completely recover. But she is well and happy.

Marriage rumors regarding Wales are dormant for a while, and talk is more of the possibility of the baby growing up to be a queen.

Wales is dividing his time between official engagements in various parts of the kingdom and seaside week ends of golf and tennis, usually in company of his equerry, Brigadier General Gerald Trotter. If anyone is worrying about his having passed his 32nd birthday without showing any signs of getting married and providing a direct heir to the throne it is not Wales himself.

In two months now the hunting season will have begun and unless he engages himself to one of the sporting British girls who on horseback chase the elusive fox across country over fences and ditches he will not have much time for courtship.

Nice trunks, large size, $11.00; large matting rugs, $7.50; beautiful floor lamps with silk shade, $12.50. Terms if desired, Klamath Home Supply Co.

Damaging Evidence Against Gaines Is Introduced

SEATTLE, August 12.—(United News)—Witnesses called by the state at Thursday afternoon's session of the Wallace C. Gaines murder trial testified that Gaines and his daughter Sylvia, whom he is accused of slaying spent a night at the New Arctic hotel here November 24, 1925.

Miss Anna Shipley, a maid at the hotel, and Mrs. Mary E. Rothwell, a housekeeper, were among the witnesses who told of the New Arctic incident.

Mrs. Rothwell said Gaines and his daughter had been assigned to separate rooms, but when she went to make up one of them at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon she saw a man about 49 or 45 years of age and a girl in bed together.

Testimony that he discovered blood stains on a shirt taken from Gaines after his daughter was beaten to death on the shore of Green Lake the night of June 16 was given by Luke S. May, criminologist.

"I found small stains of blood on parts of the shirt," May said. "One spot on the right side, was one eighth of an inch in diameter. Another stain was found to the right of the center line of the pocket halfway between the top and bottom of the patch forming the pocket and also a smaller stain near the right corner of the pocket. I determined these were human bloodstains."

The criminologist was unable to say whether the stains were made by the life blood of the pretty Smith college graduate, brutally beaten and choked to death on the shore of Green lake.

Testimony regarding Mrs. Elizabeth Gaines' alleged suicide attempt which the state contends was caused by jealousy over Gaines' attentions to the pretty daughter whom he had not seen for sixteen years, was introduced earlier in the day.

Evidence was adduced in an attempt to show that Mrs. Gaines shot herself because Sylvia and Gaines intended going away together.
