"KINSHIP"

I am part of the sea and stars
And the winds of the south and north,
Of mountain and moon and Mars,
And the ages sent me forth!

Blind Homer, the splendor of Greece,
Sang the songs I sang ere he fell;
She whom men call Beatrice
Saw me in the depths of hell.

I was hanged at dawn for a crime—
Flesh dies, but the soul knows no death;
I piped to great Shakespeare's chime
The witches' song in Macbeth.

All, all who have suffered and won,
Who have struggled and failed and died,
Am I, with work still undone,
And a spear mark in my side.

I am part of the sea and stars
And the winds of the south and north,
Of mountains and moon and Mars,
And the ages sent me forth.

—Edward H. S. Terry.

I do not think that I exaggerate the importance or the charm of pedestrianism, or our need as a people to cultivate the art. I think it would tend to soften the national manners, to teach us the meaning of leisure, to acquaint us with the charms of the open air, to strengthen and foster the tie between the race and the land. No one else looks out upon the world so kindly and charitably as does the pedestrian; no one gives and takes so much from the country he passes through. Next to the laborer in the fields the walker holds the closest relation to the soil; and he holds a closer and more vital relation to nature because he is freer and his mind more at leisure.

Man takes root at his feet, and at best he is no more than a potted plant in his home or carriage till he has established communication with the soil by loving and magnetic touch of his soles to it. Then the tie of association is born; then those invisible fibers and rootlets through which character come to smack of the soil, and which make a man kindred to the spot of earth he inhabits. The roads and paths you have walked along in summer and winter weather, the meadows and hills which you have looked upon in lightness and gladness of heart, where fresh thoughts have come into your mind, or some noble prospect has opened before you, and especially the quiet ways, where you have walked in sweet converse with your friend—pausing under the trees, drinking in the spring—henceforth they are not the same; a new charm is added; those thoughts spring there perennial, your friend walks there forever.—John Burroughs.

DELPHIAN CLUB TO RESUME WORK

There is no organization in Klamath Falls that affects so materially the body of women as the Delphian club.

When the Delphian club, Delta Gamma chapter of Klamath Falls, disbanded in the spring there were a few members who did not put their fascinating text books on shelves and put Delphian out of their minds for other things. And it is due to these few that Delphian will come forward in September, "bigger and better" in every sense of the words. A large new membership has been obtained, and although the text books for the year have not yet arrived, plans are already being outlined for the course of study.

Delta Gamma chapter will study this winter, medieval history. The first text will open with the Christian era, and before the winter's study is closed the modern age will be approached.

The first group meeting of Delphian is scheduled for the second Tuesday, or September the seventh. The group leaders have not yet been appointed, according to Mrs. Don J. Zumwalt, Klamath Falls supervisor.

The first general chapter meeting will be held the fourth Monday in September or the twenty-eighth. New officers will be seen in the chairs this month and they are Mrs. J. The winter program, outlining the work of the Klamath Falls chapter, Eulalona, Daughters of the American Revolution, reads like an interesting booklet, and plans for the coming season are already being made, according to Mrs. Wilbur Jones, newly elected regent of the organization.

The first meeting of D. A. R. will be held on the first Monday in September, the sixth, at the home of Mrs. Charles Martin on Washington street. Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Itchael Applegate Solomon will be hostesses.
