

Oklahoma Bandits Kill One, Wound Another; Escape

MUSKOGEE, Okla., August 27.—(United News)—After a running gun battle in which they killed one deputy sheriff, wounded another and kindaped a police chief, two youthful bandits today led posse numbering more than 100 men across the state line into western Arkansas where they escaped in the Ozark hills.

The entire countryside shortly after dusk had been aroused and little groups of armed men were hurrying from half a dozen little towns to aid in the man hunt. The desperadoes, believed to be members of the bandit gang which held up and robbed two banks at Covington, Oklahoma, last Wednesday, already have fought two pitched battles, one in Oklahoma and the other in Arkansas.

Their first encounter took place on a highway after they had slipped through a cordon of officers between two Oklahoma towns, Long and Muldrow.

Surprised by J. C. Wall, chief of police of Sallisaw, Oklahoma, and two deputy sheriffs as they were hurrying for the state line, the desperadoes stood their ground and fought it out. All three officers fell, Deputy Sheriff Perry Choculate with a mortal wound. His brother, Bert, was seriously injured.

Leaving the two deputies lying on the road, the bandits threw the unconscious form of the police chief into the rear seat of the automobile, jumped into it and made a dash for the mountains. Later they threw him out of the car.

GERTRUDE EDERLE GREAT RECEPTION

but it was all bewildering and confusing, and rather a bore to the chunky young red-head who had swam the English channel—until she reached "home."

"Home" to Gertrude Ederle is a few rooms behind a red brick front on Teeming Amsterdam avenue, where the population is mixed and the language is polygamous. It was from this home, above her father's meat shop, that "Trudy" set out to conquer the English channel. And when she returned Friday with the channel, so to speak, in her pocket, Amsterdam avenue claimed its own. For ten blocks, the avenue swarmed with men, women and children of all races, cheering themselves hoarse and fighting for vantage points from which to see their own heroine. Every window flew a flag, and the red brick fronts for nearly a mile were draped with bunting, business was suspended, push carts were thrust aside, the sidewalks and then the streets became packed with humanity as the first strains of music from the band that was escorting Miss Ederle up the avenue reached the throng that was waiting around her home.

These folks, with their eager faces alight with excitement, knew Miss Ederle, not merely as an American girl who had performed an unprecedented feat and won world-wide fame, but as "Trudy," the red-headed butcher's daughter who had lived among them long before she became famous and who was returning to them now.

Mayor Blushes for "Broke" City

John H. Marshall is the somewhat embarrassed mayor of Warren, Ohio, the city that has grown so fast that its revenue has not kept pace—with the distressing result that it is now "broke." While a new revenue program is shaping, a public subscription is under way to provide a new tire for one of the city's fire trucks.

U. S. NAVY OFFICER VICTIM OF PLANE

plane down only a short distance from their goal.

His injuries caused such intense suffering that he was unable at the hospital to tell how the accident had occurred. The plane sank beneath the water and left only his head, pinned inside the cockpit, above water, according to the report here.

Aviation Machinist Mate Schutt, the commander's companion, also was seriously injured, according to reports here, but the nature of his injuries was not disclosed.

The navy department notified Rodgers' mother, who lives at Havre De Grace, near Baltimore. Rodgers came from a long line of men famed in American naval history, recently retired as assistant chief of the navy's bureau of aeronautics. He had gone to Philadelphia to supervise tests of the two new seaplanes which he was to pilot to San Diego by way of the Panama canal in October.

Youthful Bandits Rob Bank America In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—(United News)—A trio of youthful bandits, apparently under the influence of narcotics, held up a branch of the Bank of America, here late today, escaping with more than $5000 in currency.

There were no customers in the bank, which is located in the fashionable Crenshaw Boulevard district. Robert Cheatham, cashier, and other employees were lined up against a wall by one of the bandits while the other two filled a sack with money scooped up from open vaults. They escaped in a waiting automobile.

STATE COUNCIL OF CARPENTERS STARTS

the fullest ever carried out by the state council of carpenters.

Long Extends Greeting

C. D. Long, local chairman for the council, opened the initial session of the convention with a short speech of welcome, delivered in the interests of the local carpenters' union. The mayor of Klamath Falls addressed the delegates in behalf of the city, speaking at length upon the high regard in which the local carpenters' union is held.

Outlining the progress of the local, President Edwards, of Klamath Falls Chapter No. 190, spoke before the assembled delegates. Other speakers were Leo Flynn, president of the Washington council, who told of the value to the union of community respect, and C. O.

Young, organizer for the American Federation of Labor.

State President Here

R. W. Sleeman, president of the state council of carpenters and also of the State Federation of Labor, is presiding over the convention, and yesterday gave a speech of surpassing interest to the delegates.

A great deal was accomplished at the opening session of the convention, in the way of state council business, it was stated, and an important phase of the meeting was the detailed report of the various districts, by the executive board.

Those in Attendance

Attending the convention are: G. H. Baker, Bend; A. Hermans, Baker; E. W. Kammerer and J. Russell, Corvallis; C. D. Long and H. B. Gray, Klamath Falls; R. Sheridan and O. D. Boardman, Eugene; S. B. Davidson and George Beatty, Salem; R. T. Whitty and E. G. Horton, Marshfield; F. L. Applegate and J. D. Beeson, Medford; and David Duff, B. W. Sleeman, J.

J. Stout, F. H. Allen, E. R. Dodds, Charles Kolb, J. D. Moore and D. E. Nickerson, Portland.

The Oregon State Council of Carpenters was organized in Marshfield last year, as a subordinate body of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America. During its one year of existence, the state council has made excellent progress and has accomplished much toward betterment of the craft, it is stated.

SARMIENTO FIGHTS TEN ROUND DRAW WITH ROSENBERG

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(United News)—Pete Sarmiento, plucky little Filipino, fought a 10-round draw with Charley "Phil" Rosenberg, bantamweight champion, in the feature bout of a boxing show here tonight.

During the bout Rosenberg knocked Sarmiento down three times, twice for a count of four and once for a count of eight. The knock-downs, however, were all that saved the champion from losing the decision. The Filipino tore into the champion from the go and by the third round had opened a big gash over Rosenberg's eyes and had him bleeding profusely.

PIANOS PIANOS

Our music store is full to overflowing with fine pianos, and in order to gain room for display of heavy shipments of the new type Victrola, Sonora and Columbia Phonographs enroute, we must reduce our stock and make more room.

Some of these instruments are the biggest kind of values at their regular National prices, while others are at cut prices on account of having been rented, etc.

This auspicious event takes place during the opening of the County Schools, and is certainly one of the best times to start your child in music with a good music teacher.

First you must have the piano upon which to practice. Why delay?
