

Sharkey Is Given Decision in 13th Round With Wills

EBBETS FIELD BROOKLYN, Oct. 12.—(United News)—Jack Sharkey of Boston knocked all the championship aspirations out of big Harry Wills of Harlem, in their scheduled 15 round bout before a capacity crowd at Ebbets Field Tuesday night but the fight ended in the thirteenth, when the negro, who had bragged so much of what he would do to certain heavyweight champions, was thrown out of the ring for continuous foul fighting.

Wills was a badly whipped fighter, and had been outclassed, out-punched and outmaneuvered in every round of the contest before the referee, Patsy Haley, finally could stand no longer the negro's foul work, and ordered him to his corner.

Patsy Haley would have been justified in stopping the contest before he did, for the black's favorite tactics of holding and pounding his opponent on the back and of swinging backhand punches coming out of clinches, began before the first bell's echoes had died away.

Sharkey won 12 rounds and one might have been classed as even. The Bostonian's work, was overshadowed by the negro's fouls, however, and the crowd of 35,000 which apparently was entirely for Sharkey kept constantly crying to the referee to throw Wills out of the fight.

After the Bostonian's snappy left jabs and severe body punches had reduced Wills to grogginess the negro became more and more deliberate in his fouling, and after 42 seconds of the 13th round Haley stepped between the men and ordered Harry to his corner.

The negro was glad to go. He had all the fight punched out of him. He made no protest.

Seated at the ringside was Colonel John J. Phelan, of the license commission, whose championship of Wills had cost New York City the Dempsey-Tunney fight. He had refused the then heavyweight champion a license because Jack would not box Harry Wills.

At the end of the fight Phelan admitted his mistake.

"Haley did just right, Wills fought foul," he said as he hurried away.

Dempsey or Tunney would have made mince-meat of the Wills who showed up in the ring at Ebbets Field Tuesday night.

Round one—Sharkey led and then jumped into a clinch. He kept going into Wills with head down. Harry boxed slowly and waited for him to come in. Wills held with his left and pounded the body with his right. Sharkey put three lefts to the head which only made Wills laugh. Both were missing and fighting awkwardly. The crowd was shouting: "No holding," every time Wills grabbed Sharkey. It was a slow round and Sharkey had the advantage.

Round two—Jack stuck two lefts to the face without a return. Wills was warned for holding and hitting. Sharkey kept rushing, but Wills wrestled him around easily and drove home some hard body blows. Harry was fighting one of his bad fights, holding most of the time, and making Sharkey come to him. Wills put an arm around Sharkey and referee Haley stepped between them to warn Wills.

It was another slow round in which Sharkey deserved the verdict.

Round three—Wills seemed undisturbed by the referee's warning. He put a right to the head and immediately got into another argument with Haley. Sharkey was working hard and making Wills miss badly. He was aggressive but Wills kept tying him up. Wills pounded Sharkey's ribs and Sharkey put a solid right to the head. Sharkey bored in, playing for the body with both hands.

The round was even.

Round four—There was a lot of clinching at the start. Sharkey put three lefts to the head at close quarters and fought savagely. Wills backed in a corner and laughed at his opponent. Wills was wrestling the lighter man around the ring. While Sharkey was throwing in lefts to the head and body, three blows to Wills' one. Wills was winded at the end of the round, but it was about even with Sharkey doing most of the fighting.

Round five—Sharkey put a right and two stiff lefts to Wills' head without a return. There was too much clinching and Wills struck a backhand blow and was warned. The negro was fighting strictly on the defensive. Sharkey hooked a left to the jaw and then a right to the side of the head without a return. Wills was fighting with every underhanded ring trick that he knew. It was Sharkey's round.

Round six—Wills landed hard right hook to the heart. Sharkey forced his way into a clinch and played for the body. Jack hooked a solid left to the head and forced Wills to hold again and again. Sharkey landed light lefts to the head without a return. He stuck three short jabs to the body and Wills pushed him into a corner and measured him with a right which missed. A left hook had opened a cut below Wills' right eye. The sixth belonged to Sharkey.

Round seven—Sharkey backed

Wills into a corner and hooked him repeatedly in the injured eye. Sharkey put a right to the jaw and Wills backed him into a corner. Sharkey was playing for the eye and put four hooks to his head without a return. Wills put a right to the heart as Sharkey went in. Jack kept complaining to the referee and Wills was warned. Sharkey hooked half a dozen lefts to the face at the bell and Haley warned Wills because the negro used the backhand.

Sharkey's round. Round eight—Harry hooked a left to the body and they fell into a clinch. Wills pushed Sharkey to the ropes and Jack hooked a left to the body. Wills claimed he had been hit low, but the referee made him fight. Sharkey made Wills miss and drove two overhand rights to the head. Wills was hooped for slapping Sharkey's back and Sharkey opened a cut on Wills left cheek with a left jab. Wills was standing uncertainly in the center of the ring, making little effort to fight. The negro's left eye was badly swollen. Sharkey's round.

Round nine—Wills tried to take the aggressive but his blows lacked steam. Sharkey was stinging him with short lefts and fighting coolly. Jack put three lefts to Harry's face. He ripped a left to the body and then pummeled Harry's face. Sharkey kept on top of his man and Wills had no clean blows to deliver. Every time he tried to hold and hit Haley was on top of him. Sharkey hooked three more lefts to the face and had Wills winded and bleeding. Sharkey's round.

Round ten—Wills uppercut with his right as Sharkey came in. Jack hammered him with left and rights to the head. He drove a right hook to the mouth which slowed Wills down, and a left swing to the jaw which had Wills dazed. Sharkey kept after his body and had Wills in bad shape. Wills kept backing away. Sharkey was mauling the negro badly at close quarters and Wills' face was a mass of cuts while Sharkey was unhurt. It was Sharkey's round and fight barring a knockout.

Round eleven—Sharkey was careless and Wills got home with rights to the body. Wills tried to open up and fight, but he was missing and Sharkey was jabbing him to the face and body. Sharkey hooked a left to the head and the fight was halted a moment, while Wills' trunks were pulled up. Sharkey put a right to the head. Jack rushed him to the ropes and Wills nearly slipped out of the ring. Sharkey put a right and left to the head without return at the bell. Wills did better in this round, but Sharkey got the edge.

Round twelve—Wills missed a wild right swing and then hit low in a clinch. Sharkey stung him with a short right to the chin. Wills again hit low and he was warned. Wills was again warned for hitting on the break. Jack crossed a right to Wills' ear and the negro backed away. Sharkey jumped in with a left hook to the body and they did some more clinching. Jack struck another short left to the body. He hooked three lefts to Wills' jaw and then brought over a right which nearly tore the negro's nose off. Sharkey's round. Sharkey jumped in as though to finish his man.

High School Team Ready to Scalp Team of Medford

Primed to a high degree with football enthusiasm, the Klamath county warriors, backed by their body of 250 students, are lying in wait for the Medford aggregation which will arrive in Klamath Falls Saturday to do battle into victory for the first big game on the home platter.

Outside of the fact that the boys are going through their "daily dose" on the gridiron every night following school hours, Coach French is sending them through a steady grilling that will make them tough as nails when they meet the Medford pigskin chasers Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. "The boys are still smarting under the Ashland defeat of last Saturday," Principal Paul T. Jackson stated yesterday, "but they are in excellent condition and 'rarin' to go' after the biggest meat in the valley."

It is probable that Zed Barnes, flashy little quarter on Klamath's eleven, will be in condition for Saturday's game, although during the early part of the week, "Boss" French ordered Barnes to save his strength. Barnes was injured prior to the Ashland game and could only play the first half in the valley battle.

Medford says she has the "low-down" on Klamath Falls, because the entire team, including coach and subs, journeyed from Medford to Ashland at the last game to get the football dope on Klamath. If the local signals are memorized, the Medford mud-eaters will be out of luck, for Klamath never does the same thing twice unless it is to be a winner.

A student-body meeting yesterday afternoon brought out the last ounce of pep and put it before all else in enthusiastic plans for the Saturday game. The Frosh are laying plans for the annual bonfire which precedes the Medford game on the home platter. The bonfire, which will announce to the citizens of Klamath that the high school is not asleep, will be lighted at 7:30 o'clock Friday night. The watchword now is, "Beat Medford," and Klamath high is asking the support of the business men whose student sponsor tickets are good for the biggest pennant game of the season.

Jack Dempsey to Meet Winner of Wills Big Bout

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—(United News)—Jack Dempsey will meet the winner of the Harry Wills-Jack Sharkey fight "if the boxing public thinks this is necessary to establish my right to a return match with Gene Tunney," the former heavyweight champion confided recently.

Dempsey and Estelle Taylor are going to retire from the limelight as much as possible and seek what seclusion they can find in Hollywood for a while before the championship begins training for a drive to regain his title.

Daugherty Likely To Escape Trial For Second Time

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—(United News)—Although United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner, prosecutor in the Daugherty-Miller $441,000 graft conspiracy trial, stood firm Tuesday on his decision to wait 30 days before determining whether to ask a retrial of the former high government officials, there is considerable doubt about another trial.

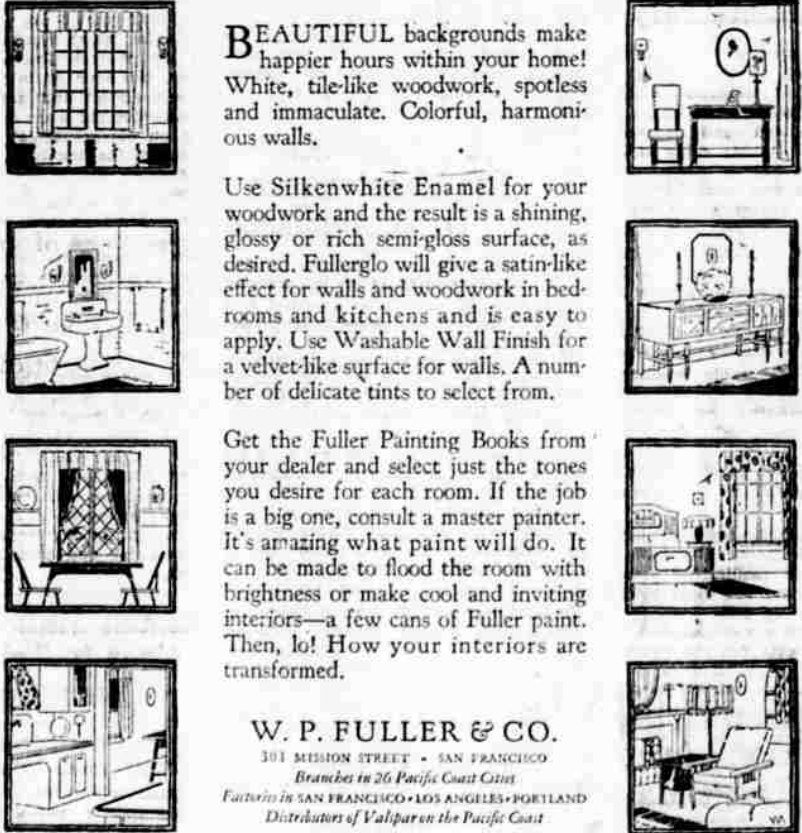

The preparation of the case against Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, and Colonel Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, took twenty months and cost the government thousands of dollars. It is pointed out that this factor militates strongly against the likelihood of a retrial.
