THE MASTER HAND

Klamath is having lots of fun these days with editorial changes and political line-ups, everybody guessing as to what the outcome will be. The master hand in one case is plainly missing. The pseudo managers in the other are evidently non-plussed.

It may seem stupid and silly and almost treason to say so, but Klamath people like to be bossed. When the whiplash is tucked away things go helter-skelter, and pandemonium breaks loose. Just as every business success is the lengthened shadow of one man, every political arena dances to the dictates of some one leader. The runways would be funny if not for this. Too many captains would wreck the ship.

Frankly, things are too tame to suit. We want to be a boy again and "shake the hand that shook the hand of Sullivan."

ASLEEP AT THE SWITCH

With less than two weeks to go local politics are about as exciting as a painted ship upon a painted ocean. The various candidates are running round in circles, with a few occasional rehearsals of no particular consequence. The whole thing resembles a matinee performance with afternoon tea served between the acts.

If anyone can get anywhere with a program of that sort, go to it! To our way of thinking the game needs to be a bit rougher than that if scores are to be made. A fortnight hence half the town will be kicking the other half because everybody got double-crossed.

POOR JUDGMENT

The old theory that politics makes strange bed-fellows applies equally to a newspaper and its friends. What can one do about election time when someone you think fairly of gets on the wrong side of the political fence? Good journalism demands good judgment, and any editor playing favorites indiscriminately will soon find himself in the discard.

Take the growing tendency to recall officials. If the truth be known, it usually originates from personal spite, with very little actual warrant for dispossess proceedings. In one case locally a really capable individual is urged into a contest to gratify the whim and caprice of disgruntled colleagues. It may add a little to his peace of mind if he realizes the odds are against him. People are too much concerned with more serious problems to bother much with this kind of indoor sport.

SHARING THE HONORS

Stripped of all technical detail, Congressman Sinnott's address yesterday clears the way for a revised estimate of Senator Stanfield. Allowing for all the senator did in the land grant bill has he allowed for all that others did? And assuming Stanfield had not been there, would the measure have fallen by the wayside? It begins to look as though effective team-work was really responsible, and that others besides the senator share in the ultimate success.

In the light of all the routine and red-tape of official Washington we are inclined to wonder that anyone is able to get anywhere with legislation calling for treasury funds. The whole procedure is hedged around with protest and contention, which compliments the work done by the House in assisting Senator Stanfield. It was good enough to be effective, and effective enough to land millions of dollars for Oregon taxpayers. Both with the preliminaries and in handling the various delegations Congressman Sinnott's part was no small matter.

NORMAL EXPANSION OF KLAMATH NEEDED

things that guard a child from temptation.

"In building this prosperous city of Klamath Falls, how are you building? How are you building homes? Do you allow shacks where there should be substantial homes? Have you a building inspector?"

"How about your streets? Are you concerning yourselves with the arteries of traffic that will be used when Klamath Falls has grown much larger than it is now?"

"Is the community back of the police department so that there will be a continued protection of your home, and your young people?"

"And your schools? Have you given them the right equipment with which the children of today can face life and its complications in the right way with a finished background?"

"Build carefully, and build soundly, and upon the proper basis of expansion you will have an empire awakening, unrivaled by any section in the state of Oregon." Bishop Remington concluded.

GIANT RUM RING CAUSE OF ARREST

ager and 12 salesmen operating in Chicago, with offices in a well known Lake Shore Drive building. A telegram addressed to "Al Brown" termed by the agents as a noted and frequent offender against the prohibition laws, is said to be none other than the notorious "Scarface" Al Capone, head of a large Chicago gang, prominent in recent killing investigations.

Indictments in New York charge the Kinder brothers as being owners of the steamship "Eker," which was seized recently in New York harbor, off Yonkers, and found to contain 20,000 gallons of alcohol in its stern hatches.

Previous to seizure the Eker had landed 46,000 cases of choice imported liquors at Edgewater, N. J., valued at more than $5,000,000, government agents say.

Captain Reeves, skipper of the ram runner, is now in a Nassau jail, facing trial for assault upon a British constable, whom it is charged by the English government, was forcibly detained on the Eker when it sailed from Nassau.

The constable, James Pindar was placed upon the boat to prevent its sailing from the Bahama port without payment of taxes. The British report claims that Pindar was assaulted by Reeves and the Kinder brothers, and even forced to unload the liquor landed at Edgewater.

Warrants issued in Rhode Island also charge the Kinder brothers with shooting a retail liquor merchant by the name of David Perlow.

Government agents here say that over 500 telegrams were found, proving that the Kinder brothers owned outright the five ships in their fleet, including the Eker and also they now have $2,000,000 in their coffers ready to defend their case.

SOUTH FLORIDA IS WATCHING STORM

Bahama Islands, unless it veered suddenly in a westerly direction.

A relief train from Miami had been ordered to Key West when it was certain that some of the storm would strike the southern city.

Reports from Key Largo, city on the island of Key Largo, approximately 50 miles south of Miami, told of a hurricane estimated at 65 to 75 miles per hour, sweeping over the territory between Key Largo and Key West at 5 p. m.

Persons on Key Largo island were hurrying into the city in every type of conveyance to seek shelter in some of the strongest houses and public buildings as the wind rapidly gained in intensity.

At the time of the last dispatched trees had already been uprooted, fruit blown from orchards and a few frame houses demolished.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—W. H. Atwood, janitor in a north shore apartment house, reacted to the cold snap today by pouring a quart of gasoline in the furnace. The detonation which resulted from his efforts to "do it better with gas" routed 29 tenants, and brought out a policeman looking for "bombers."

BIG LUMBER MILL TO BE PROVIDED capacity of the kilns be greatly increased, but the installation of modern equipment, as well as the up-to-date construction, will greatly increase the efficiency of the huge lumber ovens.

Ewauna Plant Complete

The announcement follows the recent completion by the Porter Construction company of a block of 24 dry kilns for the Ewauna Box company here, a project which cost $250,000. This set of modern dry kilns was also constructed in units, the first 10 having been built by Porter two years ago and additional five kilns last year. The remaining nine ovens for the Ewauna Box company were finished and placed into operation early this month.

The new modern kilns place Klamath Falls lumber mills in an enviable position among other mills of this section of the country, in point of high grade equipment, it is stated, and do much toward facilitating the handling of the tremendous volume of lumber manufactured here.

SAMMY MANDELL TAKES MEASURE OF CAPPED

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Oct. 20.—(United News)—Sammy Mandell, world's lightweight champion, had things all his own way in a 10 round bout with Larry Cappel, local fighter, here tonight.

Cappel was badly beaten throughout and showed flashes of aggressiveness only in the third and fourth rounds.
