SECOND GROUP OF LUMBER SALESMEN

Klamath Falls yesterday, they visited the local plant of the Ewauna Box company, and were also taken to the Klamath county potato show. That the representatives will carry word to the outside world, concerning the "empire awakening," was evidenced by their enthusiasm in the agricultural showing at the spud carnival, as well as the surprise they expressed over finding the lumber industry developed to such a high degree throughout the county.

Just 50c a month—that's all it costs for the prompt and regular delivery of The Klamath News to your home or place of business. Phone 877 now and service will start as soon as you wish it to.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS INDICATE HARMONY

sidering building into Klamath county on a more easterly route that is likely to encompass Lakeview, or at least the southeastern part of the state now untapped by through railway lines.

It is expected that other conferences will follow in Chicago, and that the railway presidents will not return to their respective headquarters in St. Paul, Portland and San Francisco until the long-awaited final word has been released.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10. (U.N.)—Possibility that the Northern and Great Northern railways may build an extension of the Oregon Trunk line into the rich Klamath Falls timber region was discussed here today by officials of three roads.

Halph Budd, president of the Great Northern, Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific, and William Sproule, president of the Southern Pacific, conferred on the problem in the offices of the Southern Pacific, but refused to divulge what plans they contemplated.

An alternative plan for the road into the timber district is for the two northern lines to contract to lease part of the Southern Pacific's line now running into that territory. It was pointed out.

While none of the officials would say what plan is being most seriously considered, it is believed that other conferences on the matter are to be held shortly, at which time a decision will be reached.

A GROWING INDUSTRY

(Medford News)

The marketing of $30,000 worth of turkeys grown locally serves to impress us with the growing importance of the poultry industry in this valley. The fact that local shippers are authority for the information that the volume marketed up to Thanksgiving this year exceeded that of last year by fifty per cent is also an indication of a rapid growth.

Christmas Spirit Prevails in City

The spirit of the Christmas elf has invaded Chiloquin and business is rampant in Chiloquin from now until after the new year makes its appearance.

Every store, where toys, candies and all manner of gifts are found, have colored their windows with next door to their pools on December's best foot forward for the holiday season.

According to word from Chiloquin, the Golden Rule, Variety store, Klamath Supply company, Stewart & Coffin store, Pioneer Drug company, and Brown's Jewelry store along with the two confectioneries have stocked their shelves with interesting gifts and toys.
