TENACIOUS

It need not be assumed the town is off the slate with the Old Guard of local politics. Various and sundry moves are being made to bring new artillery into play, at long range if necessary, but certainly into action. What a world of wonderment this tenacity portends?

Had things been better handled previously there would be less occasion now to read the riot act. If the situation seems a bit groggy, the down-and-outers have themselves to blame. We can at least wish them better luck next time.

SAY YOUR SAY

The News is getting all kinds of criticism and comment, some of it courteous, much of it anonymous, and occasionally too caustic for newspaper use. We are just as fond of fireworks now as we ever were, and so long as someone keeps up the excitement, we manage somehow to keep awake.

It is a sorry day for any of us when we fail to enjoy a joke on ourselves. If any readers will feel better after giving us a piece of their mind, let them hop to it.

THE SPIRIT OF CONQUEST

What chance is there to get two hundred new families on the land this year, with an average holding of ten acres? That would preempt two thousand acres out of the 300,000 available and give us 149 years to settle the balance.

Fine outlook that, and yet things are moving just that leisurely.

Farm colonization is not as easy as it looks, and yet how else can we reach a wholesome basis of development? The men who grow and produce, ship and market are the ones who add to local wealth and prosperity, whether the crops be cattle or potatoes, clover seed or honey. Oregon needs more producers, and Klamath is part of Oregon.

We believe the country offers the most useful life America can now show. The possibilities are there for making a living and creating a home, with some assurance of reasonable independence. But not all of us think that way or care for that environment. It takes pioneer courage and determination to organize a homestead out of bare acreage, but once accomplished the spirit of conquest sings in the blood.

CRIPPLED FOR LIFE

The picture of a boy lying in the hospital with a serious injury to his spine, is in pathetic contrast to a paltry fine and imprisonment for driving a car while drunk. It is tragedy of this sort that makes prohibition almost necessary, and which gains warrant for over-strict regulations. Some men are naturally imbeciles under the influence of liquor, and the pity is they cannot be caught and confined before any damage is done.

CONGRATULATIONS

Quite the happiest news on the wire yesterday was the wedding of Mrs. Hope Kilbourne and Mr. T. P. Henderson. It links us so intimately with memories of the White Pelican we could easily wish the hotel were back again. Certainly we miss it, and will continue to until the town grows into enough prosperity to warrant its class of investment. In the meantime Klamath will be quick to extend best regards to Mr. and Mrs. Henderson and to wish for them all the good fortune of which this section is capable.

A FINE OUTLOOK

Standing on tip-toe one can look way into Spring, and blossom-time and all the host of good things in store for us. We need this touch of optimism to tide over these quiet days, and yet we sometimes question whether business will get a chance to be very quiet. Too much going on here already. A daily round of expectancy and promise.

1927 is to be a really big year for Klamath. With a wholesome town, a busy town and a million dollar pay-roll always on deck, what more can anyone ask? The look ahead is certainly encouraging.

WINTER SPORTS

The enterprise of Fort Klamath is gradually developing a new attraction for that little town, the enjoyment of skiing and other snow-time sports. The beginning is naturally small, but the welcome is big enough for a place twenty times bigger, and once under way will eventuate into an annual feature. The wide appeal will come because of Crater Lake's steadily growing lure and its national reputation for picturesque novelty. The more publicity we can give it during the winter the larger the tourist travel during the summer, and since Fort Klamath is immediately adjacent, it is easy to figure compensating returns in business and prestige for this mid-way stopping place.
